

City's Bright with Blooms—How About Sharing?

There's no doubt about it, Victoria is the garden city of Canada and the Pacific Northwest. A drive about the city these sunny days, shows masses of blooms filling almost every garden.

Of course, at this time of year, the daffodils are the most noticeable of all flowers and the gay golden blossoms make it a privilege to live here.

But not everyone can get about the city to see the flowers—people like the patients in hospital. The only way to let them share the city's beauty is to take the flowers to them.

And so, for the sixth consecutive year, The Daily Colonist is organizing its Share the Flowers plan.

Gardeners with flowers to spare should phone

The Daily Colonist, EV 3-4111, anytime before Wednesday noon, leaving their name, address and telephone number.

And volunteer drivers are needed to collect the flowers Thursday morning. Anyone who can spare one or two hours Thursday morning should phone the Colonist office by 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Gardeners who can deliver their own flowers should take them to the Colonist's downtown office at 1215 Broad Street, between Yates and View.

The flowers will be distributed among patients in Royal Jubilee Hospital, St. Joseph's Hospital and the Veterans' Hospital.

Daffodils will be the main flowers, of course, but any flowers suitable for display in hospital wards will be welcomed.

Tiny Space In Wreck Meant Life

EUGENE, Ore. (AP)—A woman gripped safety belt rings on the floor of an overturned car, with only four inches of breathing space, through 13 hours in icy water before her rescue Friday.

Red Chinese Warn U.S. 92nd Time

TOKYO (AP)—Communist China charged Saturday that a United States warship intruded into Chinese territorial waters off Fukien province. Peking radio said the Chinese government had issued its 92nd serious warning to the U.S. against what it called such provocations.

U.S. Tourists

Mexico Beats Canada

WASHINGTON (AP)—Mexico replaced Canada last year as the country where United States residents spent the most tourist dollars.

Reporting this Saturday, the commerce department said total travel expenditures by U.S. residents in 1959 came to $2,325,000,000, nine per cent higher than in 1958.

Mexico collected $345,000,000 from American travellers, not counting transportation outlays. Canada came in second with receipts of $341,000,000.

In 1958, Canada's receipts of $323,000,000 topped Mexico's by $4,000,000.

Nanaimo Boy Rushed Here After Crash

Seven-year-old Robert Jones of Nanaimo, who apparently was struck by a car in Nanaimo last night, is unconscious and in critical condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The boy is suffering from head injuries and a broken leg. He was taken to Nanaimo General Hospital, then brought by ambulance to Victoria about 7.30 p.m.

Cut Forces 60 Per Cent U.S., Russia, China Told

LONDON (AP)—A call for a 60 per cent reduction in American, Russian, and Communist Chinese armed forces came Saturday from Philip Noel-Baker, British winner of the 1959 Nobel Peace Prize. The lifelong champion of disarmament addressed a London conference called to launch a disarmament campaign—financed largely out of his Nobel prize money.

Indian Hunt Tip to Police

Thieves' City Radio Haul Fished from Remote Bay

Sight of several Indian boys yesterday. The Indians were gone when police arrived. Police saw a number of radios lying in 15 to 20 feet of water and called for the assistance of James Quayle, 21, and his brother David, 12, both of 424 Viaduct, members of the Victoria Reef-Rover's and the Dockyard Skindiving Club.

Wearing wet suits and some Scuba equipment, the brothers dropped off the pier about 9 p.m. into the murky water. Lights on the wharf were augmented by spotlights turned downwards by police cars.

Detectives declined to speculate on why the stolen lot was dumped into the remote Central Saanich Bay.

Assassination Story Seized

PARIS (AP)—Police seized Saturday's edition of the Communist newspaper L'Humanite, which said fanatical French army officers might try to trigger a world war with assassination of President Eisenhower or Premier Khrushchev.

Disarmament Breakthrough?

Reds May Smash 15-Year Deadlock

Conditionally Offer to Sign Policed Test Ban Treaty

GENEVA (UPI)—Russia yesterday conditionally offered to sign a treaty based on a U.S. proposal for a strictly-policed nuclear test ban in a surprise move that Western diplomats said could break the 15-year-old disarmament deadlock.

The Soviets agreed to a U.S. plan of Feb. 11 that the United States, Russia and Britain sign a treaty to prohibit all nuclear test explosions except small underground blasts that are hard to identify.

ONE CONDITION

The Russians posed one condition—that the West agree to a moratorium of indefinite duration on the small underground explosions until scientists of East and West work out foolproof means to detect them.

Soviet delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin told newsmen later that if the West accepted yesterday's offer, a nuclear test ban treaty could be completed "in two weeks or a month provided there is good will on both sides."

In Washington officials promised a quick, careful study of Russia's latest offer.

VERY IMPORTANT

British officials, speaking from London, said the Russian proposal appeared to be a very important development.

On the face of it, the Soviet action meant that Moscow was now ready to permit foreign inspectors on its soil, although it still insisted that their freedom of movement be severely restricted.

Russia's refusal to permit foreign inspectors on its territory has caused the failure of every disarmament conference since the end of the Second World War.

MUTUAL INSPECTION

Some Western diplomats, however, thought that yesterday's Soviet proposal might finally make it possible to start some degree of mutual inspection. It also raised hopes the Communists might be willing to accept some workable disarmament plan in the East-West arms talks that began here last Tuesday.

The United States has proposed last month that all nuclear tests in the air, sea and outer space be banned as well as all except small underground blasts that are difficult to distinguish from earthquakes.

SMALL TESTS

The Soviets accepted this proposal with the provision to the two western powers agree to a moratorium on small underground tests below a "threshold of about a 20-kiloton force explosion"—roughly the force of the 1945 Hiroshima A-bomb.

The Soviet move came only a few days after the atomic energy commission had announced in Washington that plans were being made for a small underground nuclear explosion in New Mexico next January.

The United States and Britain have exploded no nuclear devices since early November, 1958, in an unwritten agreement not to conduct tests during the Geneva test ban conference.

Western officials have detected no Soviet nuclear blasts since that time either.

Air Crash Kills 37

BOGOTA, Columbia (CP)—A Colombian airliner carrying 44 persons crashed Saturday in northwest Colombia. Thirty-seven of 44 persons aboard were reported killed.

The plane, a C-46 of the Colombian Airlines, earlier had sent a radio message saying it had engine trouble and would attempt to make an emergency landing.

It carried 41 passengers and a crew of three.

The plane was flying to Cartagena on the Caribbean coast of Colombia from the interior city of Medellin.

Its last radio message reported it was flying at 3,500 feet and losing altitude rapidly.

The pilot said he would attempt an emergency landing at Planetaria. He apparently was trying to approach an airport near there when the plane crashed.

Resident of Planetaria said they saw the plane coming down with its engines inoperative.

The pilot and co-pilot were among those killed.

Deep Snow Spring Gift To Halifax

HALIFAX (CP)—A storm swept into parts of Nova Scotia Saturday on the eve of the official beginning of spring, dumping up to 10 inches of snow and closing some roads.

The storm moved at speeds of up to 80 miles an hour from Cape Hatteras as Nova Scotia was recovering from an earlier series of heavy snowfalls. Serious drifting was reported in southern counties but most main highways were kept open.

Two Die, Some Hurt When Ships Collide

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—The U.S. destroyer escort Darby, with several dignitaries aboard, collided Saturday night with a Swedish merchant vessel, killing two men aboard the Darby and injuring others.

No injuries were reported aboard the merchantman Soya.

The Darby was carrying assistant navy secretary Richard Jackson and Rear Admiral Robert T. Keith, assistant chief of naval operations for naval reserve, and representative James E. Van Zandt. None of the distinguished visitors was injured.

The navy said the Darby, which apparently suffered serious damage, was expected to arrive at the Norfolk naval shipyard today.

The merchant vessel moved under her own power some four or five miles from the crash scene and anchored.

Canada-Wide Pension Pleas To Be Unanswered This Year

OTTAWA (Special)—Members of the House of Commons of all parties are getting considerable mail from constituents urging them to advocate an increase in the universal old age pension. Suggestions of the size of the increase range all the way from $50 to $20 a month. There is no likelihood, though, according to informed sources, of any legislation providing for a higher pension rate this year because of the economic conditions generally.

The universal old age pension was raised in 1957, to $55 a month as one of the first acts of the newly-installed Diefenbaker government.

Statisticians have figured $53.02 in constant term dollars

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

THE mystery ship of Sidney Inlet was wrecked by woman trouble.

That's the story that Sid Watson, 1318 Prillman Avenue, Victoria, heard from the old Indians on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

Naval divers and historians are still trying to solve the mystery of the ooze-encrusted wreck that was found by a Seattle skindiver.

The 140-foot hull is of copper-sheathed teak. The ship lies tilted, her bow 35 feet below the surface, her stern at 70 feet. The Smithsonian Institution is examining a corroded good-luck coin which was taken from under a mast.

Mr. Watson says Ahousat Indians burned and scuttled the schooner and killed everyone aboard because crewmen had kidnapped a number of Ahousat women.

"About 1934 I was working up at Riley's Cove on Flores Island, at the pilchard reduction plant," he says. "I think Riley's burned down since."

"The plant was about five or six miles from the bottleneck, where I found the old hulk. The old-timers told me about it."

"I went down in my canoe to take a look at it, at low water. I could see her down there. I didn't pay much attention. It was just one of those things."

"When the first stories came out about hunting for the wreck, I said they're looking in the wrong place; she's down in the bottleneck. That was where I'd seen her."

"The bottleneck is a bay, shaped just like a bottle."

"The ship had called in at Ahousat when the men were away, and grabbed a lot of the women. The old bucks came back, and chased the ship, looted the stuff from her, burned and scuttled her."

"According to the story they gave me, they killed them all."

"If the ship was heading for the outside, she'd have gone by Estevan Point. But it's a big channel there. They could have been easily spotted. But going down into the bottleneck, it's sheltered there and she couldn't be seen too easily."

Naval divers last week found charred wood that told of fire in the ship before she sank.

Victoria Veterans' Hospital nurses are upset about a bureaucratic rule that threatens to rob them of some of their holidays.

At one time, hospital staff members who had to work on statutory holidays were allowed to take another day on their vacations—provided that they took the vacation within a month.

Now they are forbidden to do that. They must take their pay for working on the holiday in cash (straight time).

Letting them take an extra day's holiday "is an irregular practice and contrary to the intent of the regulations," says District Personnel Circular Number 141.

Effective April 1, "compensatory leave will be no longer granted . . . This procedure is to be strictly observed."

A number of other workers besides nurses are affected, including assistant orthopedic appliance maker, cleaning service men, elevator operator, cooks, technicians and telephone operators.

Some would just as soon be paid in cash. But a number of staff member feel they are being pushed around. "I'm going to be sure to take my two days' sick leave, to make up for losing a holiday," a nurse said.

Judges Censure Official Meddling

OAKLAND, Calif.—Traffic court judges Charles Fisher and Robert Kroninger charge the U.S. state department tried to influence a case involving grandson of Chiang Kai-shek. Kroninger sentenced business college student Alan Chiang, 25, to three days for speeding, then suspended sentence because "I have never jailed anyone for a slight speeding violation."

Senior judge Fisher ruled against diplomatic immunity, saying: "The state department said there would be international repercussions. I told them it was nonsense."

Crash May Ground All U.S. Electras

TELL CITY, Ind. (AP)—Investigators searching the wreckage of an exploded airliner disclosed Saturday that two senators may urge federal authorities to ground all Lockheed Electra turbo-prop planes.

Disclosure came after Indiana's two senators met with Civil Aeronautics Board investigators digging in the farm field where a Northwest Airline's Electra turbo-prop exploded and crashed Thursday, killing all 63 aboard.

Both senators said structural failure may have caused the huge craft to fly apart in flight.

"The grounding of the Electra certainly should be considered by the federal Aviation agency due to the heavy toll of lives," said Sen. Vance Hartke, a Democrat.

Robert Williams and J. T. Hornsby, FAA officials, refused to say if grounding of the Electra is under direct consideration.

Hartke and Sen. Homer Capehart, a Republican, said they thought structural failure caused the plane to explode in the air.

Capehart said: "The airplane apparently lost some parts and continued losing them progressively until it crashed."

Civil Aeronautics Board experts hoped the crater's rubble would yield clues that might tell what happened.

Smoke had poured from the hole in the soybean stubble field since the plane crashed.

Saturday the smoke subsided enough for two investigators to go down into the crater with foxhole shovels. They found a piece of a $20 bill, a ringed finger and a scrap of a letter being written on the plane.

Unsmiling Queen Avoids the Crowd

LONDON (AP)—The Queen, in a pensive mood, left Buckingham Palace Saturday for the first time since the birth of her third child.

The Queen, alone in the back seat of her limousine, left by a side gate at the palace, avoided crowds gathered outside the main entrance and headed for Windsor Castle and a quiet day with her family.

At Windsor, the Queen still kept the crowds at a distance. She told her chauffeur to take her in a back entrance.

Newspaper photographs of the Queen, first since the birth of her son just a month ago, showed an uncharacteristic picture.

Her lowered eyes and slight pout contrasted with the smiles and handwaves she usually dispenses when out driving.

Shortly after nightfall, the Queen drove back to the palace, looking as pensive as when she went out. About 400 people were gathered at one of Buckingham Palace's front gates. The Queen drove in through the other one.

Holiday for Only 25 Cents City Tourist Week Prize

It will be well worthwhile buying a Tourist Appreciation Week button this year—the 25 cents for the button will help finance the week of tourist publicity and could win a trip for two to anywhere in Canada.

Or it might win a holiday for two in Hawaii, San Francisco or Seattle.

Those are the prizes offered to buyers of TAW buttons this year, TAW chairman Dr. Hugh Borsman said last night.

In addition, entries are still being received in the essay and poster contest being conducted among Greater Victoria high schools this month, for which $25 prizes are offered.

And on April 1, the annual TAW questionnaire contest will open, with another prize, not yet decided.

Dr. Borsman said probably only one question would be posed this year and the public will be invited to write to the chamber of commerce, expressing their opinions.

Police Head Slays Wife, Kills Self

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Police Chief Eugene Smith, 47, who could face 250 angry segregationists in the street but found it hard to cope with the thought of his son's being a burglar, murdered his wife late Friday, then killed himself.

Mrs. R. J. Herbert, who lived next door, found the bodies in the kitchen of the Smith home. The six-foot, three-inch body of Smith, in trousers and T-shirt, was on the floor.

He had shot himself once. The fully-dressed body of Mrs. Smith, 44, was slumped in a chair, with three bullets in it. Her husband's .38-calibre service pistol was lying on the floor.

ONLY SON

Their only son, Raymond Eugene, 20, pleaded guilty in Searcy, Ark., Friday to helping three other young men break into a drugstore and make off with watches, cameras and $200 in cash three weeks ago.

Smith was a tough but fair policeman who so impressed dozens of newsmen covering the integration of Central High School last August that most of them signed a testimonial for the way he had treated them.

Central, after two bitter years of strife, was finally ordered integrated last Aug. 12 by the Little Rock school board. About 250 segregationists marched from the state capital upon it.

"HOSE 'EM DOWN"

Smith, in front of a force of police and firemen, stepped into the middle of the crowd and ordered the march to stop. The segregationists didn't step back as fast as Smith thought they should and he ordered: "Hose 'em down."

Firemen opened up with their hoses on the crowd and, stinging and drenched, it broke up. There has been no trouble at Central since.

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivian troops crushed a revolt by a national police regiment Saturday after a five-hour battle in the outskirts of La Paz, the government said. Ten persons were reported killed in the fighting and 30 wounded.

The government radio said President Hernan Siles Zuazo commanded the government forces that surrounded the rebels on Calvary Hill just north of the capital.

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — The radio said the leader of the rebels, Col. Hermogenes Rios Ledesma, head of the national police, escaped before his encircled force threw down its arms.

Two major candidates in Bolivia's forthcoming presidential election, joined Siles Zuazo in the fight against the rebels, the radio said. The insurgents battled government troops with mortar and small arms fire, causing heavy damage to offices of the Remington Rand Typewriter Co. in the suburban area.

48.1% were from $2.00 to $5.00
13.7% were from $5.00 to $10.00
1.5% were over $10.00

Looking Ahead in Trade

WITH every month that passes it becomes more apparent that Canada may need to reorient some of its established trading practices in future if the volume of export shipments is to be maintained or improved. The creation of a common market among six highly industrialized states in Europe, and the more recent development of a free trade organization among seven other nations outside of that, is presenting a number of imponderables for this country in overseas markets. Both common market and free trade areas plan progressive relaxation of internal tariffs and shipping quotas, with the object of increasing an exchange of goods within their zones; but neither yet has solved some of the political and economic difficulties which the new trade structures are bringing into being.

In an extensive report on the situation so far as Canada is concerned, the Bank of Nova Scotia in a recent review suggested that considerably more attention will need to be paid by Canadian shippers to the changing design and new patterns of overseas markets, which for years have been considerable outlets for Canadian export trade. The review points to two phases of the situation, the near future and a few years hence when overseas markets may be interlocking and difficult to enter.

One consequence of the free trade area's response to the common market may be the gradual reduction of the existing Commonwealth preferences in some highly competitive lines of trading. Canadian lumber exporters may have increasing difficulty in meeting the lower costs and standard production of Scandinavian shippers, it is suggested. The same competition applies in base metals. Canadian wheat, on the other hand, should be under less disability in the same trading zones. In manufactured goods the prospect of Canadian overseas sales is not bright, because both European trading zones are highly industrialized and have finished products of their own to sell. In the long view an increase in the world volume of trade would be an encouraging prospect, but for a decade perhaps Canada may have to feel its way and to work harder at the problem of meeting more competitive conditions abroad.

Breakwater Dangers

COMPLAINTS about the Turkey Head breakwater now nearing completion at Oak Bay appear to be well founded in one respect. While the groyne may not be quite the eyesore which some dissatisfied residents say it is, the element of danger to children does appear to exist. No amount of warning or more intimate discipline is going to stop some children from exploring the breakwater, at the risk of broken limbs or worse. As was said of Mount Everest, the fact that it is there is enough.

However, those who are protesting now should remember that when the federal government approved the project in the first place the intention was to construct a breakwater and nothing more. It was to provide shelter for small boats against the storms which frequently strike a convenient but hitherto unprotected anchorage and landing place. It was not to be an ornamental pier or promenade; nor was it designed for fishermen. That was clearly stated at the time; and it is what the government had been requested to build. Before work ever started it was announced that the breakwater would be built of rough stone fill and would not be surfaced. Had a finished structure been insisted upon when the idea was mooted the probability is that the expenditure would not have been approved.

Now that the job is nearly finished the government representatives on the west coast can see just as well as residents of the area can that there is danger. Perhaps if the situation which may not have been foreseen during the drafting stage, were explained to Ottawa a further appropriation would be forthcoming to fill the interstices between the rough and jagged boulders and thus minimize the risk and also afford a new direction for pleasant walks. The point to be remembered is that Oak Bay got what it asked for. It might also get the extra touch if it asked nicely.

Fares and Safety

THERE is a cartel in international aviation. No oceanic airline cuts its fares or its standards with an eye to underbidding a competitor. That would break an agreement held tightly by the associated lines. It is a case of all or none.

In this instance however the cartel serves a cardinal purpose—that of safety. It is after all safety that is the most important element of air travel. Dollars or meals or service of any kind must take a back seat to security measures. And with flight there can be no tampering with the main object of taking off at one place and landing safely at another.

Last week airlines of the world met to discuss fares and allied matters at a meeting of the International Air Transport Association. Lower rates were of major consideration, following on the economy class introduced two years ago on ocean flights. Air travel is now so popular that the object is to increase the traffic by bringing the price down as low as possible. That is a normal and good business objective.

With airlines there is a boundary however beyond which it would be risky to pass. The conference agreed to a new fare structure for other ocean routes but not for the Pacific. Agreement on the latter is probably only a matter of time but meanwhile there will be no price-cutting war in a bid to secure passengers.

That is the assurance given and it is fundamental to air travel. Price-cutting would undermine public confidence because passengers might feel the interests of safety were being sacrificed. The cartel aspect is thus a safeguard. Security is too important to be left to one line alone, and must be subscribed to by all association members. And its relation to the fare structure is the reassuring sign.

Interpreting the News

Canada's Role Studied

By DAVE MCINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IS the West's ability to prevent war deteriorating? In the opinion of some informed officials in Ottawa the answer is "yes." And, they feel, this deterioration will continue in the immediate future.

The West's ability to prevent major war is the nuclear deterrent, which in the main is the United States Air Force's Strategic Air Command of heavy bombers armed with hydrogen bombs.

Strategic Air Command was built on the assumption that the Soviet Union would not risk nuclear bombardment of North America if Russia had to accept—and knew it would have to accept—a devastating nuclear counter-blow.

Consequently, Strategic Air Command is not a deterrent if it can be knocked out or severely crippled by a surprise attack.

To prevent this, the SAC bomber bases, mostly in the continental U.S., must be protected.

This protection comprises the radar warning networks and interceptor planes and missiles formed in a great arc around the U.S.

Canada's contribution to this protective screen and thus to the war deterrent is nine interceptor squadrons and radar.

As far as this country is concerned, the question must be: Is the protection afforded by Canada stronger or weaker than a few years ago in relation to the Soviet bomber threat?

The reason for this is that the CF-100 jet interceptor is eight years old, an octogenarian in military aviation, and there has been no government decision to replace it with a better plane.

The Bomarc anti-aircraft missile is not scheduled to come into operational service in Canada until 1962 or 1963, depending on when its electronic control machinery is ready.

In the meantime, Strategic Air Command has not been able to acquire the funds that would enable it to maintain an airborne alert. An airborne alert is keeping as many bombers as possible in the air so that they could not be caught on the ground by surprise attack.

Warning of bomber attack has been improved and U.S. fighter squadrons have been given new interceptors.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

IT is on record apparently that the sister of Gina Lollobrigida is aghast at the idea of her living in Toronto, and the Montreal Star, hailing from where it does, says she is not alone in this.

But while the Montreal paper opines that the prospect of Toronto has daunted a good many people at one time or another—scarcely knowing the Ontario capital I wonder why, albeit I might hazard a guess—it is not bent on probing a wound.

In fact, with a magnanimity which does it credit, it declares that living in Toronto is very popular with Torontonians and it is not necessary for them to explain why.

They just like it. Here we have humanity in a nutshell, and it is just as well. Victorians eye Vancouver much as doubtless Montrealers do Toronto, and we should be equally quick to agree that Vancouverites don't need an alibi for preferring to cluster around Burrard Inlet.

After all if they didn't like it there they might all come over here and spoil our little bit of heaven, and nobody wants that to happen.

So, aping the altruism of The Montreal Star, let us concede that Vancouverites do not have to explain this strange choice of residence. People are not good at giving reasons for their likes and dislikes, anyway. Mostly they are inarticulate about something that essentially is a matter of feeling and not words.

You remember that George Mallory, of earlier Himalayan fame, used only four simple words to answer the query: "Why do you want to climb Mount Everest?" But they were fundamental: "Because it is there."

If he had been a lawyer arguing a case, a spokesman at a disarmament conference, or perhaps a columnist trying to renege on an unwise remark, he might have indulged in a clinical analysis of his reasons.

But no. Being honest it was his inner sense that spoke; his feeling. He just wanted to climb the mountain, that was all.

The trouble of course is that feelings not readily being put into words, opposites are hard to reconcile. This will be exemplified, I wot, at the Geneva arms talks. The East and the West each has a disarmament plan, and while diplomats are never lacking in verbose explanation, they feel their own point of view. That it is the best, for instance.

And in so doing they don't cotton to the other side's ideas.

Not being so eloquent and unable to invent facile falsities ordinary folk simply fall back on a plain "I like it" or "I don't like it" when pressed to explain some queer preference.

The other fellow's is always queer. If yours is different, naturally.

People, actually, are an irrational conglomeration. This is why they never recognize in themselves the faults they see in others, and why so often they say today what they will contradict tomorrow. Politicians especially are adept in this respect.

And yet, I suppose, people can't help their seeming inconsistency. They respond to an inner urge and only the heroes can discipline their feelings. Most of us are quite unheroic.

It should be enough therefore that when one likes a thing that he—well, just likes it. Hard though it may be for Gina's sister to admire Toronto the fact is that Torontonians do and that's all there is to it.

Or so the Montreal paper says anyway.

What Books Do They Read?

Royal Family's Leisure Habits

(From John O'London's)

WE make no apology for returning to a question we asked on 26th November: "Do members of the Royal family read new books?" Then we said that despite the lack of evidence we were perfectly prepared to believe that they did. As a result of this editorial we received a great number of letters from readers.

Most of them supported our contention that since the Royal family gives its coveted patronage to films, plays, dress and "pop" music it would surely not be unreasonable to ask, even to expect, a similar patronage of literature. Other readers objected to the views we expressed because it was felt they might result in an intrusion on the privacy of the Royal family. If we asked those readers as a point of interest which books they were reading at the moment, would they, we wonder, tell us to mind our own business? Surely not.

The interest in the activities of the Royal family, including their reading, is world-wide. It may surprise our readers to learn, for instance, that this subject has become a talking point all over the world where the English language is spoken and that it has commanded the attention of leading newspapers throughout the English-speaking world—with the singular exception of those in the United Kingdom.

The New York Times quoted our editorial and described it as a "fair complaint"; the Sydney Morning Herald, a leading newspaper in Australia, not only reprinted our editorial but quoted special interviews with Commander Richard Colville, press secretary to the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh, and with Major Howard

Griffin, press secretary to the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret; the Adelaide News also reprinted our editorial and followed it up the next day with interviews with the royal press secretaries; similar reaction came from other leading newspapers in the United States and in the British Commonwealth.

Since we introduced the subject and since the people of the United Kingdom have so far been denied the facts emerging from the royal press secretaries' statements, it is fitting that we should now make them known. After all, the people of the United States and the Commonwealth have known these facts since November!

Interviewed by the Australian Associated Press on Nov. 26 last Commander Colville said, "It would be dishonest for me to say the Queen is a great reader of novels," and he added that the Queen is interested in the various war diaries that have been published, in Churchill's memoirs and other biographies, but "she has little interest in heavy literature."

Commander Colville then went on to make a surprising assertion. If the Queen's taste in reading, he said, became the subject of the same amount of publicity as her visits to the theatre, "it would not make a scrap of difference to the literary inclinations of the British public." On what basis, we wonder, can a man whose job is that of a press secretary say what will or will not make an impact on the reading public?

Indeed he went on to say, "I have no doubt that if it was known that the Queen had enjoyed a book by Agatha Christie, sales would increase—in the United States they would double." "But," he added, apparently realizing his self-contradiction, "that does not benefit literature."

The Duke of Edinburgh, he said, had "little time to settle down to a good book," but the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret, according to Major Griffin, read books "on a slightly higher plane than detective stories."

From all this information gleaned by the overseas press it is clear that our question, "Do members of the Royal family read new books?" has been answered in the affirmative. Surely, then, it is not too much to ask that the titles of the books they have read and enjoyed should be disclosed. Would it not be an excellent thing if royal interest were to stimulate public reading?

We do not seek to establish a "Princess Margaret Book of the Month" or a "Buckingham Palace Choice"; we would merely like to know the titles of the books which members of the Royal Family have found enjoyable or valuable. The information would give a healthy stimulus to public reading and would greatly encourage the author, publisher and bookseller alike.

The Royal Family would itself benefit from this kind of publicity just as at the present time it suffers considerably, particularly overseas, from the lack of publicity about its cultural tastes which has led to a widespread belief that its leisure-time interests lie only in the field of light entertainment.

We believe that some members of the Royal Family enjoy good books, good music, good art. Why then may we not know—and publicize—something about these cultural interests?

Gina, Stay in Italy!

(From The Ottawa Journal)

THERE'S an item from Toronto that the curvaceous Gina Lollobrigida plans to move to that city. Well, now, just as Hollywood figures have the right to strike, so too do we suppose Gina Lollobrigida has the right to move to Toronto.

But has she really thought this over? Have they told her about the sidewalks in Toronto, how they roll them up on Sundays; and about the proprieties of living in the shadow of Queen's Park? Has her brother-in-law warned her about the quality of food along Yonge Street, that sidewalk restaurants would be prohibited as vulgar, that Communists are verboten and even men who wear beards unless they edit magazines? And what, pray, will she do for entertainment—watch Morley Callaghan? Or maybe slip on a sheath and go out to Sunnyside?

Ah, no. Gina, this is a terrible thing you're doing. Look before you leap, and don't leap. A foreigner one day wrote a poem about Montreal, "O God! Oh Montreal!" he said; but he hadn't seen Toronto.

Time Capsule . . .

Comic Legislature

TWENTY-FIVE years ago, Reichsführer Adolf Hitler shocked Europe by announcing that Germany was going to increase her armed forces, regardless of the Treaty of Versailles.

He contended that other powers had already broken the treaty. Capt. Anthony Eden, Britain's Lord Privy Seal, went to Paris to confer with Laval of France and Suñer of Italy.

Then Capt. Eden and Sir John Simon were due to go to Berlin for a "peace" conference with Hitler.

CONTRACTS for the building of two more Canadian Pacific Railway "Princess" liners had been placed in British yards, 50 years ago.

Capt. J. W. Troup, superintendent of the B.C. Coast Steamship service of the CPR, told reporters about the contracts when he came back from the United Kingdom.

Capt. Troup said that submarine bells were to be placed on the B.C. coast as aids to navigation, probably at Gossip Reef, the Sandheads and another place.

THE Vancouver Island Legislature was a cramped, chilly place full of ridiculous people. That was the way The British Colonist newspaper saw it, 100 years ago.

"If ever there were a place where Cruikshank could make a fortune in copying originals for caricatures, it is in this colony. The comic and ridiculous are here in abundance."

"We well remember the old House of Assembly a year ago, meeting in a room in the Fort, with an inch of dirt on the floor, and the smoke as plenty (sic) as in an Indian wigwam."

(The Indians here did not have wigwams.)

"We have seen the Speaker and a now deceased member with a harmful of bark to light the fire, before they electrified themselves with pica-yune questions."

"Debates partook more of the character of a lot of Bavarians after they had swallowed the sixtieth glass of lager, than men who aspired to the style and prerogatives of an Assembly."

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

A HUMAN beagle of my acquaintance—one of those business executives with nothing in his soul or body but a leech-like devotion to his job, whose only recreations are a little golf for purely business contacts, and a little yachting in summer for no purpose but to entertain prospects—has been telling me of an extraordinary experience.

"For 25 years," he says, "I have been driving to work by the same route from my home to my office: down the same streets to the through street, down 20 blocks of the business section; a route so familiar to me after all these years that I could drive it in my sleep. It is as unconscious a process as walking from my bedroom at home into the bathroom. I don't have to think, feel, look. I am free to devote my mind to my business affairs."

"A month ago I had a row with my children, who are grown-up. They ganged up on me. My daughter said I knew nothing of the art of looking. She bet me that I couldn't name a single shop, describe a single interesting store or street corner, offer a single piece of evidence that I had looked at anything on any of the 300 days per annum that I have been driving through my home city for a quarter of a century."

"Know something? I couldn't!"

"For the past month I have been cultivating the art of looking. I can now tell you almost every shop, garage, parking lot, news stand, flower shop, hotel, beauty parlor on the route. What a fascinating town this is!"

Silly Saving

Now that the time has almost arrived for the publication of the new telephone directory I would like to make the following comment:

Is it not ridiculous to continue to abbreviate the street names, when in many cases only one letter has been omitted? I understand that economy was the reason given for doing this and never did the saving of so few dollars result in so much confusion. If I, who have lived in Victoria all my life, have difficulty in deciphering some of the street names from the telephone book, what of the strangers who are unfamiliar with the city?

I am sure that the telephone company would regain the goodwill of many of its customers by returning to the common-sense way of doing it.

Guided Leaders

The wounds in countries which were caused by Hitler's wrong thinking are still tender.

The one real hope of nations living together in peace can be found only through a change in the human heart. We must show that we have something more to offer for human happiness than two cars in every garage, plus a speedboat and buy-now-pay-later. Everyone has a part to play in the future of his or her world.

It is easy to find fault in others, but not so easy to correct our own faults.

What we want is so different from what we need. A new generation comes along about every 20 years. It seems to be more interested in guided missiles than in guided leaders. Surely we all need to pray that the leaders in every country will be guided to do what is right.

Water for Colwood

I regret to see an article in the Colonist this morning, (March 17), quoting Mayor Scourah, chairman of the Greater Victoria Water District, which is quite misleading as it is not a full disclosure of all the facts.

The article entitled "Scourah: No Vote Without Paying." The truth is, in my case, that I have offered the water district two alternatives: (a) Instead of the company itself laying and paying for the pipes, I will lay the piping required, putting in and paying the whole cost for all pipes, connections, etc., not only along the public road but through my subdivision as well, if the water board should repay me out of sales of water made through such piping; or (b) that I will pay for all such work as above mentioned if I be allowed to collect from my lot purchasers the cost from water they receive through such pipes.

But no, the water district, holding a monopoly on all water within a radius of 20 miles of Victoria, requires me to give them as a free gift the pipes laid and paid for by me, the same board then collecting and keeping all monies received from water sales. In other words the entire cost of buying, laying pipes and connections for further mains, no matter how costly, must be a present to the board, without a cent cost to them.

The whole of Colwood is being held back in development by this, and heavy loss is being sustained, incidentally without any representation.

This water board is cutting off and selling timber from the Sooke Lake watershed—plenty of actual money profit over and above the price paid the City of Victoria for the same. The water commissioner refuses to say what the board is receiving from the timber sales, which is now at top price. This could amount, I claim, to plenty to extend the whole system for the benefit of all, if need be—even perhaps to northern Saanich.

If I am forced to pay for all the water board's demands it will cost me close to $76,000, with no return to me.

Tax-Dodge Secret

Out from Under

By WARREN FRANKLIN
United Press International
Members of the International Society of Tax Avoiders have received unexpected and timely help from a British economic historian.

"Migrate—get out of the country," advises C. Northcote Parkinson to those whose tax burdens have become so calamitously heavy there is no other economic solution.

"After all, the whole point of the flight of the Israelites from Egypt to the Promised Land was to get beyond the clutches of the tax collectors," he said.

Parkinson, who admits he takes his own advice but "doesn't announce it from the rooftops," is the author of a new book of humorous essays twitting some of the prized notions and theories of traditional economists.

Entitled "The Law and the Profits," it advances, according to the publisher (Houghton Mifflin Co.), his ominous-sounding theory that expenditure rises to meet income.

For the layman, i.e., the suffering taxpayer, this gets down to what Parkinson analyzes as the perpetual conflict between tax collectors and tax avoiders.

"The conflict resolves itself into a continual stalemate in which neither side wins," explained Parkinson. "The wasted economic ingenuity could have been utilized in far more productive channels. The ultimate loser is the nation's general economy."

For examples of wasted economic ingenuity in the U.S., Parkinson cited two publications of the U.S. Department of Agriculture—"Teen-age Girls Discuss Their Wardrobes" and "Job Attitudes of Supermarket Employees." Cost of both for survey, compilation, interpretation and publishing approximated a half-million dollars each, he said.

Peace Brings Out the Knives

By PHILIP SYKES
Telegram News Service
What a dastardly thing is peace!

It seems to bring out the worst in diplomats.

As the time for talking peace nears, they sharpen up their verbal knives and needles, launch themselves into intensive training for the next round of sword-play and back stabs.

It's needlework so far at the current 10-nation disarmament talks in Geneva. It'll be broadswords at the Paris Summit in May.

In between, there'll be next week's flashing duel of those formidable political swordsmen, Charles de Gaulle and Nikita Khrushchev.

This week a brainless child was born in Nagasaki. And in the shadow of the grotesque creation, the disarmament wrangle resumed.

The U.S., Britain, Canada, France and Italy on one hand; Russia and four East European Communist powers on the other; plans and counter-plans and counter-counter-plans.

For the East, there was Mr. Khrushchev's apparently unattainable complete-disarmament-in-four-years plan; behind that, the compromise proposition—the Polish-born Rapacki Plan for a nuclear-free zone of "disengagement in Europe."

For the West, there was the three-phase disarmament plan newly agreed in Paris.

This plan was on the lines of the one put forward by Britain's Selwyn Lloyd as an undramatic curtain-raiser to Mr. K's flamboyant "end all armies" performance before the UN last year.

But the Western plan now puts destruction of nuclear stockpiles ahead of the final massive troop reductions. That much is new.

Why did Charles de Gaulle insist on this new emphasis? Because—alone among what are loosely termed "the great powers"—France is currently waging a massive "conventional" war against a rebellious colonial people.

Because France is patently the weakest as well as the newest member of the nuclear club—a disparity that is embarrassing to French pride, but which would disappear with the universal destruction of stockpiles.

The reasoning may be narrow, nationalistic, selfish, if you like.

But I say it is sound. Troop reductions—in the context of its global struggle—which made the Geneva talks necessary, are no longer worth arguing about.

pletes their home (or, in some cases, even sooner! Sometimes this works out all right, except for the inevitable fact that the home's resale value is low because it was built by an unknown contractor. Sometimes, and especially in tight money times like this, it results in tragedy—the unfinished home is tied up by a flock of legal actions against the contractor, and the hopeful owner is left holding the bag.

How to avoid this? Just shop for a home the way you shop for less important items. Pick a well-known, well-established builder who stands behind his work, and you won't go far wrong. ## Territorial Waters

Canada's Plan Best

By RONALD COLLISTER
Telegram News Service

WASHINGTON — Canada's plan for fixing territorial waters and offshore fishing limits is the one most likely to succeed at the second Law of the Sea conference in Geneva.

However, stormy and difficult sessions lie ahead.

The best chance of success rests in the feeling among all responsible nations that agreement must be reached or the consequence will be chaos.

There has to be give and take all around, but the plan that is nearest to an acceptable compromise is offered by Canada, a six-mile territorial limit and a further six-mile exclusive fishing limit.

A 12-mile territorial sea (not envisaged in the Canadian plan) would badly hamper freedom of the seas. For example, it might turn the narrowest part of the English Channel into the exclusive territorial waters of Britain and France.

It is estimated that this limit would close 116 important international straits.

The belief that the U.S. is going to back Canada's plan is provoked by Senator Warren Magnuson from the State of Washington, who says the state department has backed the "six-plus-six formula" of Canada and has "publicly offered compromises that would destroy the bargaining position in relation to its common fisheries with Canada."

Rep. Thomas Pelly, also of Washington, accuses Canada of offering a plan that is "in her own selfish interest... Canadian fishermen hope thereby to eliminate our American fishing fleet."

"Then," he charges, "Canada would look to the United States as her market for those same fish."

This bitterness at home raises another problem. If the United States backs Canada, will Congress approve the new regulations?

Boiler-Room Stock Bill Patchy Job

By HARRY YOUNG Colonist Business Editor

The B.C. government during the last few days of the 1960 legislature pushed through an amendment to the Securities Act aimed at curbing the activities of the phone-peddling stocksters.

The hastily-launched bill was altered after its introduction to the House because it was feared one of its clauses could play havoc with legitimate stock and bond marketing.

The government proposed that licensed security dealers would not be allowed to phone the homes of the public unless they had done at least five trades with the person involved.

Members of brokerage and investment associations together with officials of the Vancouver stock exchange foresaw that this could lead to innumerable difficulties and possibly prosecutions, of a frivolous or unwarranted nature.

As a result, the Attorney-General changed his bill by adding a clause that charges against brokers could not be made indiscriminately by members of the public but only with the consent of the Superintendent of Brokers.

The new bill is only a patchwork repair job that does not get down to the root of the trouble.

The government realizing this, is now anxious to make a further review of the Securities Act in conjunction with the various brokerage associations.

Year Must Elapse

Unfortunately this means that another year must elapse before the public can hope for proper protection from the machinations of boiler-room operators.

Most securities experts think the trouble in B.C. is insufficient vetting before new issues are licensed. They would like to see a securities committee formed that would include representatives of the government, the brokers and the Vancouver Stock Exchange, and that no new issue, except of a trustee nature, could be authorized for sale in B.C. without the consent of that committee.

Legal Money Raising

He said the Saskatchewan Securities Commission, when money was needed for mining, oil or natural gas exploration or for new industrial enterprises, made itself responsible for ensuring that the money was raised lawfully.

He then quoted an article of mine in the Daily Colonist which indicated that foreign risk capital was shunning Canada because of the bad reputation the country was getting as a haven for stock racketeers and boiler room operators.

"We want investors to know that they are safe with Saskatchewan issues," said Mr. Cameron.

Mr. Cameron added that when he was with the Ontario Securities Commission, he did not agree with Chairman O. E. Lennox's policy of law enforcement.

Mr. Lennox proceeded on the basis of chipping away at the worst and most flagrant cases, because otherwise he feared he might have disrupted the whole industry of raising risk capital.

"In my observation the slow steady pressure principle in Ontario has failed miserably," he said.

Mr. Cameron said it was now the goal of the Saskatchewan Securities Commission to make fraudulent promotion virtually impossible, and that it was now being recommended that a law should be passed to give the investor right of rescission of his purchase contract where the seller is convicted of illegal action.

Strict to Slack

Because the securities laws in the provinces varied from strict to slack control there should be an overall Federal Securities Act with uniform enforcement of it.

He claimed this would avoid the problems of promoters moving one jump ahead of the law from one province to another, and making their "kicks" as they went.

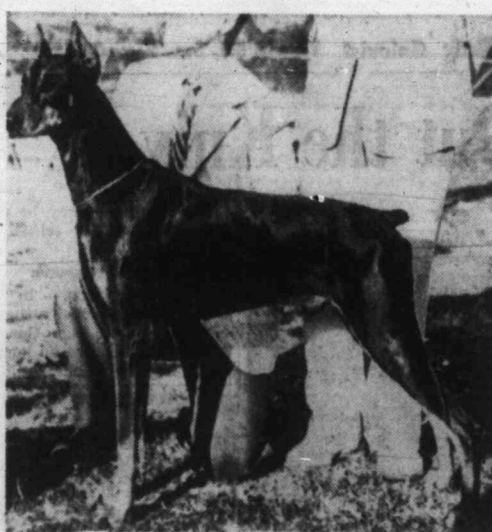

The stocksters look for the weak spots, and Mr. Cameron said that late in 1959 an American ex-convict, whom the U.S. attempted to extradite several years ago, was promoting stocks in the Yukon Territory, where there is no securities law at all!

I commend Mr. Cameron's speech to the attention of Mr. Bonner.

B.C. Power Corporation is issuing 150,000 new common shares, it was learned yesterday. They are being offered to the public at $31.

Newsprint production in Canada in February was 533,596 tons, up 14.5 per cent from the corresponding month of 1959.

Clearings at the Victoria Clearing House for the week ended March 17 were $8,106,276, compared with $9,466,510 in the corresponding week of 1959.

Big Money Demand Makes High Interest Rates Certain

VANCOUVER (CP)—You can figure on interest rates continuing to be high this year. There'll be too much demand for money.

That was the picture presented here Saturday by Norman Alexander of Winnipeg, president of the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada.

ENERGY REPORT

Many millions of dollars in new capital are going to be required this year if—as expected by investment men—the National Energy Board brings in a favorable report on natural gas export.

That, combined with provincial, municipal and corporate financing, will create a strong demand for money and tend to keep interest rates "not too far from current levels," Mr. Alexander told reporters.

Along with association managing director A. G. Osburn of Toronto, Mr. Alexander is on the last leg of a cross-Canada tour.

He said he has noted "general confidence" throughout the country in business conditions. The tight-money situation of a year ago "is certainly not as chronic as it was."

COYNE BACKED

He endorsed a call by Bank of Canada governor James Coyne for Canada to adopt a long-term goal of reducing its dependence on foreign capital.

Canadians should "save more, be more frugal and invest more," said Mr. Alexander.

"If we do have to borrow money in the United States, we should use it for something that generates earnings to help pay off the debt—not on items like roads which are a dead issue."

Fund Opens For Widow

A fund to assist Mrs. Howard J. Smith, mother of four children whose 23-year-old husband was drowned a week ago near Crofton, has been started in the Langford and Colwood districts.

Mrs. Smith and her children live at 837 Orono Avenue, Langford. She is expecting another child.

In charge of the fund is Rev. Donald Hatfield of St. John's Anglican Church, Colwood, and St. Matthew's Church, Langford. Donations may be sent to him at the rectory, 520 Mount View Avenue, Colwood. It is hoped the response will be sufficient to pay off a mortgage on the home.

Possibility of Greater Victoria having a 999 emergency-call system was revived Friday when intermunicipal committee decided to seek the views of the area's police and fire chiefs on having a single alarm centre.

Both counts charge the companies with monopolies which were likely to operate to the detriment of the public.

Want to Borrow a Million?

It Can Be Arranged With a Banker's Bank

LONDON (AP)—Want to borrow a quick million or so with a minimum of bother?

You can arrange it if you know any of about 13 discreet firms deep in London's financial district. Of course it helps if you're a bank.

For these are bankers' banks, with officers so aristocratic that they're never seen outside during business hours without their black silk top hats. The world's mightiest banks are among their customers.

These are men who can raise or lend £1,000,000 in a 30-second telephone call. And they do it as casually as if they were asking friends down for a weekend of pheasant shooting.

The 13 firms—called discount bankers—make up the London money market, for generations unique in the world.

Economists consider their delicate machinery for borrowing and lending huge sums of money within minutes, the greatest single reason for London's continuing importance as banking centre of the world.

They conduct genteel telephone conversations with the money departments of the dozens of British and foreign banks in London.

"Yes, we could let you have 600 thousand until tomorrow. Money is a bit short today so I'm afraid we'll have to charge 3 per cent. Can you manage?"

"But if you like we can extend yesterday's loan of 350 thousand at 3 1/2 per cent."

"Right you are, then. And you will let us know by a quarter past two if you'll be needing any more, won't you?"

"Thank you so much."

LaFarge Cement Buys B.C.'s Deeks-McBride

VANCOUVER (CP)—French-owned LaFarge Cement of North America Ltd. has bought outright the British Columbia building materials firm of Deeks-McBride Ltd.

Announcement of the sale was made Saturday by T. P. N. Jaffray, a director of Dominion Securities Corp., which put the transaction together for LaFarge. No figures were released, but the sale price was reported to be about $2,000,000.

Deeks-McBride marine equipment includes one tug, one self-unloading cement barge and 10 other boats. It also owns a clay products plant at Sidney, B.C., and distributes various building materials.

Lieutenant Governor Frank Ross of B.C. is president of LaFarge of North America.

Together these houses handle more than £1,000,000 or more in an average five-hour day. But in floor space and number of employees they are insignificant.—the entire money market doesn't employ more than about 400 people, including everyone from directors to messengers.

The directors frequently handle their own calls. When a million may hang on one brief telephone conversation, a two-minute delay or error through a switchboard operator cannot be risked.

Proposal Ill-Timed

Berlin Vote Sidetracked

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. will sidetrack West German Chancellor Adenauer's proposal for a plebiscite in West Berlin but will challenge Soviet Premier Khrushchev to hold a self-determination vote in Russian-occupied East Germany.

Officials said yesterday the feeling here is that Adenauer's suggestion for a pre-summit plebiscite in West Berlin was ill-timed.

It would only prove what is already known—that West Berliners overwhelmingly reject any change in their status which might leave them at the mercy of the Communists.

A hastily-arranged plebiscite just before the summit, designed only to re-emphasize the obvious, might well react against the West, they said.

It could be interpreted by the Kremlin as a gratuitous slap at Khrushchev designed to poison the pre-summit atmosphere.

The Allied call for a plebiscite in East Germany probably will be presented to Khrushchev when he meets with the U.S., British and French leaders in Paris May 16.

Secretary of State Herter told Adenauer last week of the U.S. plan to challenge Khrushchev. At a speech soon after, Adenauer sprang his plebiscite surprise as "an idea I just had," and the U.S. checked Bonn and Berlin to find no support for it.

The U.S. feels it can let the idea die until after the summit, unless Adenauer insists. If so, Herter and colleagues probably will plead lack of time.

English Secretaries U.S.-Status Symbol

NEW YORK (UPI)—The fad among New York businessmen to import English secretaries as a status symbol because of their accent may be a violation of the state anti-discrimination law, and the state commission against discrimination has ordered an investigation.

It is against the law for employers to specify that any prospective employee be of any race, creed, color or national origin.

One employment agency said it had received many requests for English secretaries not only because of their accent, but because they were polite and could spell.

Hamilton Overtakes Winnipeg

HAMILTON (CP)—Hamilton now is Canada's fourth largest city.

Norman Wilkes, assessment commissioner, says the city has passed Winnipeg in population as well as in area and assessment.

"We now rank fourth behind Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver," he reported.

Hamilton's population is 258,576 compared to 257,898 in Winnipeg.

In area, Hamilton is almost twice as big—29,519 acres to only 16,192 acres in Winnipeg.

Hamilton's assessment now totals $504,815,400 compared to $451,114,071 for the Manitoba capital.

PEKING (AP)—A rally of 10,000 persons Saturday launched a drive for friendship between Red China and Latin America. Peking radio said Premier Chou En-lai attended the flag-waving, speech-making event.

Chiefs' Opinions Sought On 999 for Emergencies

Oak Bay appeared to be alone in doubting that a single emergency number would be advantageous.

He suggested that reports be secured from the chiefs on the number of times difficulty had been "experienced by residents through their inability to remember emergency numbers," holding that "anyone with a grain of sense puts emergency numbers on a card beside the telephone."

Reeve George Chatterton of Saanich quoted an article saying that Winnipeg, with the number "999" serving the city and 16 adjoining municipalities, found the cost to be 8.28 cents per capita. Saanich fire-call service alone costs almost 50 cents per capita, he said.

"Don't forget you haven't the B.C. Telephone Co. in Winnipeg," said Reeve Murdoch.

But Reeve A. C. Wurtele of Esquimalt said the B.C. Telephone Co., which once estimated the cost of a single alarm centre at $50,000 a year, had "changed its attitude" and was ready to make a study if the committee was interested.

Nikita Won't See Paris Cathedrals

PARIS (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev starts his once-postponed visit to France Wednesday under a bobtailed schedule that omits the original plan for a tour of several cathedrals.

Several Roman Catholic church leaders had shown open hostility to the Khrushchev trip. He wants to see and be seen as well as to hold ground-laying talks with President de Gaulle before the May conference.

Back in travelling trim after an attack of influenza, Khrushchev will spend about three days in Paris, visit a dozen provincial cities and deliver a TV-radio address to France before going home April 3.

Final details were announced Saturday after long negotiation that apparently ran into several snags.

The Soviet leader originally planned a two-week stay, but arrangements have now been compressed into 12 days.

Among other things, a projected helicopter trip over Paris and a visit to the French air force school at Salon were cancelled.

Khrushchev reportedly wanted to speak to Parisians from the city hall, as President Eisenhower did in September. This has been dropped.

Storied Birr Castle, home of Antony Armstrong-Jones' mother and titled stepfather, may be the scene of Princess Margaret's honeymoon.

Romantic Irish Spot

By TIM CURRAN
BIRR, Ireland (Special) — The people of this quiet little Irish town are convinced, although Princess Margaret's honeymoon "spot" hasn't been announced, that she and Tony Armstrong-Jones will spend at least part of it at storied Birr Castle, home of the groom's stepfather, the Earl of Rosse.

This would be the first visit to Ireland by British royalty since George V and Queen Mary came here before the First World War.

James Dooley, a local business man, said Tony has visited Birr Castle since he was a boy of six.

"His family is very popular here, and if he and Princess Margaret decide to visit Birr, they will certainly get a terrific welcome."

Last January, as the girls of Abbeylisk now remember with a shiver of delight, Tony attended a party, given by his sister, Lady de Vesel, and her husband.

One of the girls told me Tony danced with many of them. "He is a smashing dancer," she recalled, "but he couldn't manage the Irish cello dances (jigs and reels) at all."

Not long ago Tony attended the coming-of-age party of his half-brother, Lord Oxman-town, heir to the Earl of Rosse at Birr Castle.

Another rumor here is that the Earl of Rosse may purchase an Irish castle for Tony and his bride.

A castle in County Wicklow (adjacent to County Dublin) owned by Lord Powerscourt is understood to be on the market.

Birr—county seat of County Offaly—is situated near the confluence of the Little Brosna and its tributary, the Camcor River.

Next to Tullamore, it is the largest town in Offaly.

At Birr Castle, the outstanding building in the district, only the foundations remain of the original Black Castle of the O'Carrolls.

The forerunner of the present castle was built in 1620, and it changed hands several times in the wars of the 16th and 17th centuries.

The demesne of Birr Castle, with its gardens and riverside walks, is open to the public in normal times.

But the mansion, occupied by the earl and countess, is private—unlike many British castles, where visitors pay admission to look around.

In the grounds I had a drink at the famous St. Brendan's Well.

St. Brendan was a disciple of St. Patrick and founded a monastery which, according to tradition, lay in the river valley below the castle.

Castle for Royal Honeymoon?

No More Kangaroos Available as Pets

Who would want a kangaroo hopping around the house as a family pet?

It has become the craze among some of the more fashionable families, particularly in Europe and the U.S., and one which the Australian government is determined to stamp out.

Irritated by having the country's national symbol put on a par with a French poodle, the government has decided to ban all commercial exports of live animals and birds.

50,000 BIRDS

It started when a government statistician in Canberra discovered that 50,000 of Australia's colorful tropical birds were being exported as pets every year.

He also uncovered a flourishing, and quite legal, trade in kangaroos, emus, wallabies (a smaller version of the kangaroo) and cuddly koala bears.

If it was allowed to continue, federal authorities feared that in 10 years, as the overseas demand grew, many species would be in danger of becoming extinct.

ZOOS ALL RIGHT

Public zoos will not be affected by the ban. But they will have to order their Australian exhibits through an Australian zoo in the future.

The sudden export ban is going to cost dealers in Perth, Adelaide, Melbourne, Sydney and Brisbane at least $225,000 a year.

The dealers are returning thousands of pounds paid as deposits by overseas customers. Hundreds of animals waiting to be shipped will have to be sent back to the bush and the jungle and turned free under the new law.

One dealer near Melbourne, who has supplied Australian animals for zoos all over the world, was caught by the order with 40 kangaroos, 100 geese, 48 ducks and 80,000 finches waiting to be shipped.

To permit the expansion of the growing overseas market for kangaroo meat, kangaroo tails (used for making soup) and kangaroo hides, the government will continue to allow the commercial export of carcasses, skeletons, skins or plumage.

Exploration and Golf

Desert Wilderness Has All Comforts

The wilderness of natural desert can be found in the Borrego area of eastern San Diego County, Calif.

The rugged desert, smart resorts, a lush valley and a 460,000-acre state park make up one of the most unusual scenic spots in the United States.

PAINTED DESERT

The De Anza-Borrego State Park encompasses eroded clay hills of the painted desert and such oddities as Split Mountain, the Elephant Trees and dinosaur tracks, as well as the rare desert bighorn sheep.

The park offers limitless scenery to explore. More than 400 miles of travel routes follow the scenic hills, eroded into fantastic shapes by wind and rain. Trails crisscross the Borrego Badlands, deep canyons and the rugged granite mountains rising from near sea level to more than 6,000 feet.

EARLY EXPLORERS

Many of these same trails were originally opened by the early explorers Anza, Fages, Arguello and later Kit Carson.

This area in years past was a centre for desert travellers, gold-seekers, Mexican immigrants, and desperadoes.

Today, it is filled with "rock hounds" searching for various-colored tourmaline, beryl, crystal quartz and the traces of other precious and semi-precious gems and minerals.

Located in Borrego Valley is the winter resort of Borrego Springs, where a new 18-hole golf course sparkles with green fairways, miniature lakes and table-top greens.

Other recreations include swimming, tennis, riding and archery. Luxury accommodations are offered at guest ranches, desert cottages and hotels with country club atmosphere.

Odd Fellows Rally Here

Members of Independent Order of Odd Fellows lodges in Ontario, the Prairie provinces and the B.C. Interior were present last week when Victoria Odd Fellow Lodge No. 1 celebrated the 96th anniversary of its founding.

Main speaker was James Main of Vancouver, Odd Fellows' provincial secretary.

Mayor Percy Scurrell brought civic greetings, and congratulated the lodge on its support of worthwhile projects.

BOB WHEATON AND MARGARET IWASAKI

Two Canadian Records Set At Provincial Swim Meet

By LARRY ROSE

Former British Empire Games competitors Marg Iwasaki of Vancouver and Bob Wheaton of Victoria established Canadian records Saturday during the B.C. Open swimming and diving championships at Crystal Garden.

Miss Iwasaki, swimming under Vancouver Dolphin Club colors, broke her own Dominion record with a time of 2:34.0 in the 200-yard senior women's event. Her previous record was 2:40.4.

Wheaton, a member of the Victoria YMCA team, snapped the Canadian 100-yard butterfly mark with a time of 1:01.9. Ed Cazalet of Vancouver Amateur Club held the former mark of 1:03.0.

TEN MORE

In addition, 10 other records were broken in the meet. Nine of these were Canadian age group marks while the other was a similar B.C. record.

Vancouver Amateur Swim Club won the meet with an unofficial total of 300 points. Vancouver Dolphin Club followed with 271 while Victoria YMCA was third with 217 points.

Victoria Amateur Swim Club, one of the surprise leaders, followed with 101 points. Vancouver YMCA had 40 points.

Big Welcome For Athletics

ALBERNI, B.C. (CP)—Alberni Athletics, who dropped the Canadian senior title to Tillsonburg, Wednesday in Montreal after forcing the series to the fifth game, were given a heroes' welcome on their return here Saturday night.

About 500 hometown fans crowded the Athletic Hall for ceremonies during which mayors of Alberni and neighboring Port Alberni welcomed the players home.

Hawks, Celts Leading, 2-1

Boston Celtics and St. Louis Hawks, first-place finishers in their respective division in the National Basketball Association, held 2-1 leads in their best-of-seven semi-final series.

Celtics turned back Philadelphia 120-90 Saturday while St. Louis whipped Minneapolis 93-89. Fourth games of both series will be played today.

Just Like Space Satellites

Grouse Pack Radios

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The ruffed grouse, like outer space, is soon to be studied by means of special radios transmitting a steady "beep."

The Federal Communications Commission, in an announcement headed "radio has really become something for the birds," said it had authorized use of tiny transmitters mounted on the game birds to study their movements.

The meet was Wheaton of Victoria who set his Canadian record in the evening finals after tying the previous mark in the afternoon heats.

Setting new Canadian age group records were:

1. Mary Stewart, Vancouver Dolphin, in the 100-yards backstroke event for girls age 13-14.

2. Aldy Meinhardt (Vancouver ASC), in the 100-yards freestyle event for boys age 15-16.

3. Cathy Campbell (Vancouver Dolphin), in the 100-yards backstroke event for girls age 15-16.

4. Vancouver Dolphin, in the 200-yards medley relay event for boys age 11-12.

5. Bill Sangster, Vancouver ASC, in the 100-yards breaststroke event for boys 13-14.

6. Mary Stewart, Vancouver Dolphin, in the 100-yards butterfly event for girls 13-14.

7. Sheila Campbell, Vancouver Dolphin, in the 50-yards butterfly event for girls age 11-12.

8. George Rust, Vancouver YMCA, in the 50-yards freestyle event for boys age 10 and under.

9. Shirley Cazalet, Vancouver YMCA, in the 50-yards backstroke event for girls age 10 and under.

Setting a B.C. age group record was Cathy Campbell of Vancouver Dolphin in winning the 100-yards butterfly event for girls age 15-16.

Wheaton, who entered the tourney in the special bracket for bowlers with an average of 165 or under, came through with a series of 564 and 545 for 1,109 and fifth place.

Wilson started quickly with a 622 series on games of 208, 187 and 227. In his last block of three, he rolled 168, 189, and finished with a 221 single for an even 1,200.

Begg had the high three of the day, a 629 to start with games of 223, 193 and 213. However he slipped to 538 in his last three games. Munn's games were 165, 211 and 222.

His effort put him in front in the 48-man race for the two Victoria berths in the B.C. championships. The tournament, which started on the Strathcona Bowling Alley lanes yesterday, continues to day with six more games at Gibson's Bowladrome and winds up next weekend with six more games at each house.

Pressing Wilson yesterday were Roy Begg, manager of the Strathcona lanes, who shot 1,167, and Ken Munn, the only two-time champion in the history of the event. Munn was 37 pins behind Wilson with 1,163.

Defending champion Wilbur Webb was fourth with 1,115.

The University of Minnesota will conduct the unusual experiment on a research grant from the National Science Foundation.

The FCC said six male grouse will be equipped with one-ounce, battery-operated transmitters which will send out signals to monitors in a one-mile area of the research centre.

Biologists manning two receivers are thus expected to get a good idea of just how the grouse spends his time.

The experiment will last 30 days, about how long the batteries in the miniature transmitters are expected to hold out.

Each bird's radio will operate on a different frequency for verification purposes, the FCC said. It added that interference to man-made radio is not anticipated.

Cougars' 4-3 Victory Sets Up Semi-Final That Opens Friday

If what took place at Memorial Arena last night was to be a preview of one Western Hockey League semi-final, fans in Victoria and Seattle are in for some interesting playoff hockey. And the Cougars rate no worse than an even chance to carry on into the final against the winner of the Edmonton-Vancouver semi-final.

With nothing at stake, the Cougars and Totems came up with an interesting game which went into overtime before the Cougars were able to stretch their season-long superiority over the Totems on Victoria ice by winning 4-3.

Don Blackburn, working hard all evening, deservedly earned himself the hero's mantle with a rather spectacular goal after three minutes and 23 seconds of extra play.

The big sophomore winger took a pass from Jim Hay at the red line, broke into the clear on the left side, cut in and rifled a shot past Bev Bentley just before he went sprawling into the end boards.

With league president Al Leader cracking the whip, the Seattle-Victoria semi-final won't open until next Friday and if it goes seven games, the clubs will play three in a row twice.

First game is at Seattle Friday, the second here Saturday, the third in Seattle next Sunday and the fourth here the following Wednesday. If it goes beyond four games, it's the Friday, Saturday, Sunday routine all over again.

Last night's game further indicated there is little to choose between the two semi-finalists with the winner likely to be the club which can break the home-ice advantage. The Totems took only three points out of Victoria in seven games, the Cougars did only a shade better in Seattle.

Both clubs played it wide open last night with Totems, after conceding the first goal, coming back against a Cougar club which seemed to let down a bit to take a 3-1 lead into the second period.

GOOD CHOICE

But Paul Masnick, proving it more with each game that the Cougars were fortunate to get him as a replacement for Arnie Schmutz, got the Victoria club started in the second period. Then Seattle defenceman Frank Arnett turned Pete Wright's iced shot into the Seattle goal to tie, the clubs played through a so-so third period, and Blackburn provided the rousing finish.

Gordie Fashoway, deflecting a shot by Art Jones, scored on a power play to give the Cougars a start and chalk up his 34th goal of the season. It is the 10th time in 12 seasons that the veteran left-winger has scored 30 or more times.

Bill MacFarland, Arnett and Guyle Fielder, who has his fourth straight scoring championship clinched although he will have to hustle in his last game, tonight against Vancouver, to reach 100 points for the fourth season in a row, scored for Seattle.

Leicester City Ends Wolves' Big Dream

LONDON (Reuters) — Wolverhampton Wanderers Saturday watched two fleet Leicester City forwards snatch away a dream.

The Wolves and Blackburn Rovers, two of the last four clubs in the English Football Association Cup final, both were beaten 2-1 in league games by Leicester City and West Ham United respectively.

For the Wolves, it meant their dream of winning English soccer's elusive "double" of league championship and FA Cup were all but shattered.

A win for the club would have brought it within one point and easy shooting distance of the first-division leader, Tottenham Hotspur, which held its three-point lead with a 1-1 tie against Fulham.

Now, with only eight games left, the Wolves have only an outside chance of pulling into the lead.

The double is extremely rare — it hasn't been won this century.

The powerful Wolves got into the cup semifinals by defeating Leicester City 2-1 a week ago Saturday, then saw Leicester win revenge by reversing the result.

But Bruins Are Through

Three Questions Not Settled

One of four major questions confronting National Hockey League followers was answered yesterday — Boston Bruins won't be in the Stanley Cup playoffs this year.

There are still these vital matters to settle: Goals Jacques Plante of Montreal and Glenn Hall of Chicago are tied in the race.

GP W L T F A Pts
Montreal 69 40 17 12 255 175 92
Toronto 68 34 28 6 186 184 77
Chicago 69 28 28 13 184 184 67
Detroit 68 28 34 7 115 286 63
New York 69 16 38 15 184 246 47
Last night's scores: Chicago 6 at Toronto 1; Boston 1 at Montreal 5; afternoons, New York 3 at Detroit 6.

Final games tonight—Chicago at Boston, Toronto at Detroit, Montreal at New York.

for the Vezina Trophy; Third and fourth place, a battle between Detroit and Chicago is by no means determined.

And Bruins' Bronco Horvath still holds a one-point lead over Chicago's Bobby Hull for the individual scoring title.

The foregoing will be settled tonight in the final games of the 70-game schedule. Montreal plays at New York, Chicago at Boston and Toronto at Detroit.

TWO HURT
Black Hawks, trying to hold onto third place from Detroit, will be hampered tonight and possibly for the playoffs by the loss of two players, Stan Mikita suffered a broken cheekbone last night trying to stop a puck with his face in Toronto and Eric Nesterenko suffered a concussion after a collision with Red Kelly.

Kelly scored the only goal as Leafs whipped Chicago 1-0. Montreal Canadiens finished off the Bruins 5-1 and Red Wings paved the way for that occurrence by trimming the Rangers 6-3 in an afternoon game.

Dealing with the forementioned questions, the situations are as follows:
Both Plante and Hall have goals-against totals of 175 and the Vezina trophy, plus $1,000 is on the line.

Victory for Wings and a loss by Chicago would send Red Wings into third place and the unenviable position of meeting Montreal in the semifinals. Toronto meets the fourth-place finisher.

Horvath leads NHL point-getters with 80 while young Hull, who really arrived in the big time this season, has 79. Gordie Howe, Detroit star, is third with 76.

ERNIE BANKS... big gun

Cubs Can Bank On Ernie Again

Ernie Banks, the National League's most valuable player for the last two seasons, apparently plans to be the big gun for the Chicago Cubs again this year.

The slugging shortstop rapped out three hits, including a home run, Saturday as the Cubs edged Boston 5-4. Frank Malzone of the Red Sox also collected three hits and has hit safely in 12 of his last 15 at bats.

In other games, Kansas City's best Washington 3-1, Pittsburgh downed Detroit 7-4, St. Louis blanked New York 2-0, Cincinnati trounced Milwaukee 9-2 and Los Angeles defeated Philadelphia 7-5 in 10 innings.

Home runs by Marv Throneberry and Norm Siebern, both former Yankees, gave the Athletics their third straight triumph.

This unique church near Duncan may be sold before its completion because builder George Turner has run into financial difficulties. — (Colonist photo by Charles Thompson.)

English-Type Church May Be Up for Sale

Builder Has Run Out of Cash

DUNCAN—The builder of an English-style church near here is contemplating the idea of putting it up for sale.

"I've run out of cash and need quite a bit more before I could finish it," said George Turner, Norcross Road, yesterday.

CLOCK FROM U.K.

He brought Italian stone-masons from Vancouver for the brickwork, bought a clock from England that was installed in a piked Norman tower and worked on it himself for more than three years.

"I've had a lot of satisfaction doing it, I've always wanted to build a church, but now I'm faced with the fact that if I can't get some money to finish it I'd might as well sell," said the retired businessman.

CHRIST CHURCH

Mr. Turner calls it Christ Church. It is a replica of a church with the same name near his childhood home in England. He hoped the church might be used for non-denominational services.

He asked that he be allowed to express his thanks to Herbert Cashman, Victoria; G. Max Bell, Calgary; Mrs. M. A. Turner, Ladysmith; Dorothy Abrahams, Victoria; Mrs. M. V. Jones, California, and G. A. Gahert, Montreal.

HAVE TO BE SOLD

"Unless sponsors will volunteer their assistance to complete the church, it will have to be sold. The funds derived from the sale will be used to build a smaller and less costly church in a more spiritual and co-operative locale," said Mr. Turner.

Sponsors are needed for "shingles and their application, wiring and fixtures—a heating unit and its installation, materials for the pews and for painting the inside of the church."

DONATIONS ASKED

Donations will be accepted by the Bank of Commerce and placed in the Christ Church building fund.

Pain-Wracked Worker Fights Board Ruling

First War Survivors Reminisce

Forty-five years after Victoria's 67th Battalion of the Western Scots sailed for overseas on March 24, 1915, 63 survivors met to relive the days of First World War last night at the Moose Hall, Fort Street.

Included in the ranks were William Lovelock from San Leandro, Calif., who had a son serving in the U.S. Army in the Second World War. Other far-flung veterans present were Capt. George Linney, the unit's adjutant, from Edmonton; W. E. Fraser, from Prince George; and W. Dunlop, from Oakland, Calif.

Jack Lowe from Duncan, one of the two surviving members of the Western Scots pipe band, with his son John piped the gathering to their places at table. Cecil Heaton presided at the piano for the 40th time.

Secretary Harold Rourke told the gathering that eight former comrades had passed on since last year's reunion and that each one had a commemorative wreath placed on his grave.

A father of six living at Royal Oak is entering the eighth month of his dogged battle against a ruling that he isn't entitled to compensation for a crippling back injury.

Felix Fisher, a Polish-born former RAF flyer who brought his family to Canada in 1951, has been repeatedly turned down by the Workmen's Compensation Board but he refuses to believe his case is hopeless.

LOSS OF HOME

Meanwhile, he and his English-born wife, Florence, face the loss of their home if arrears on the $7,500 mortgage are not paid within 60 days. Their savings are exhausted, bills are piling up, but welfare services are helping out.

Mr. Fisher was a welder earning $2.50 an hour at Yarrows Ltd. Aug. 12 last year when he was given the job of welding a 1,000-gallon tank. He said he moved the tank and "felt something click" in his back but the pain didn't last and he went on welding.

SHARP PAIN

Then he felt a sharp stab of pain run up his back and into his chest. "... I was afraid I had a heart attack," he said.

He reported to first aid, later phoned his own doctor and was told to go home, where the doctor examined him and within an hour of the accident had rushed him to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

One day later, Mr. Fisher was transferred to isolation ward—as a suspected polio case, he later learned—and in a few days, after X-ray examinations and treatment, he was discharged. He was advised the pain in his back was "something I'd have to live with" and after several weeks returned to his job.

Yarrows put him on light duties, but he lasted only four hours before the pain became unbearable. There was a three-week wait for a hospital bed, then more examinations, more treatment, and he was once more sent home.

Meanwhile, the Workmen's Compensation Board had turned down his case.

TRACE BITTERNES

There is a trace of bitterness in his voice as he talks of his long fight to win his case.

"If I'd engineered it all, told a lie, I would be all right," he said. "But I tried to tell it right. Because I didn't go to the office and say my back is hurting. I can't carry on with the job, I'm told the injury must have happened somewhere else."

Army Veteran Dies at 82

Major Arthur Grosvenor Piddington, retired army officer who resided in Victoria since 1925, died suddenly yesterday in his home at 1100 Burnside Road West. He was 82.

Born in Beauport, P.Q., Maj. Piddington served with the Royal Horse Artillery and was a veteran of the First World War.

He is survived by his wife, Helen, at home; two sons; five daughters, and four sisters.

Coercion, He Says

Loyalty Oath Not for Boy

NEW YORK (AP)—A high school boy has refused to sign the loyalty oath required by the city board of education before he can get his diploma.

Edward Jahn, 16, a senior at Bayside High School, says he believes the oath, required by the board since the First World War, is a form of coercion.

School principal Samuel D. Mowkowitz described the boy as "a good kid" and an "intellectual who does not accept things easily."

The boy's father, Julian A. Jahn, a sociologist, said Friday that if the diploma is withheld there might be a court test of the loyalty requirement.

Death Closes

Police Chase

VANCOUVER (CP)—A police chase ended in death Saturday for a 17-year-old youth when the borrowed car he was driving side-swiped a police vehicle, then plunged through a guard rail at Prospect Point in west-end Stanley Park. The victim was identified as Alfred Boyle of Vancouver.

A Wheel Story

Keystone Cops Chase Again!

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—It was like something out of the silent films of the Keystone Cops.

A police wagon bearing several prisoners broke down at the top of a hill. Two wheels fell off, and one started rolling down the hill.

The policemen chased it to the bottom. Meanwhile, at the top of the hill a car stopped. Two men got out, picked up the other wheel, and sped off in the car. The police watched helplessly from below.

The wagon had to be hoisted on a wrecker and towed. The prisoners were taken to headquarters in a police car.

Teenage Road-eo April 9

Victoria's teenage drivers will get a chance to prove their driving skill on Saturday, April 9.

Occasion is the annual Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce Teenage Road-eo, to be held at the Garbally Road property of the B.C. Electric Co.

"We are interested in trying to find out what high school driver education in Victoria schools has accomplished," said Tom Affleck, project chairman. "Road-eo is designed to give young motorists a chance to prove and improve their driving habits and to promote safe driving in their ranks."

The contest is open to any boy or girl 16 years of age or over who will not have reached their 20th birthday before July 1, 1960. It is open to any boy or girl who would like to compete. Drivers who have been found guilty of a moving traffic violation within the past six months are not eligible. Local winner will receive an expense-paid trip to regional finals in Vancouver, where a winner is chosen for one of three scholarships totalling $2,500.

The trouble with social scientists is, they usually ask the wrong questions.

Take, for instance, the problem of murder. There are all sorts of ways to approach this awful problem, but nobody but a sociologist (or psychologist) could possibly have thought of the method employed by Dr. Stuart Palmer, assistant professor of sociology at the University of New Hampshire.

He interviewed murderers' mothers to find out whether they fed them on fixed or demand schedules when they were babies, when they started their toilet training, at what age they told them about sex, and so on.

Dr. Palmer's study is described in detail in "A Study of Murder" (Crowell).

He Saw Every One

He found 51 such cases and interviewed every one of the 51 mothers. Then he statistically analyzed the data about the murderers and their brothers.

He had started with the hypothesis that murderers experience a greater amount of frustration in early life than non-murderers. On the whole, the statistics bore him out. His conclusion, therefore, was this: "To prevent murder, decrease the frustration experienced by individuals in early life and provide more socially acceptable outlets for aggressive feelings."

Mother Was Upset

Henry Savoy grew up in a French-Canadian, Catholic family. His father ran a machine in a shoe factory.

Henry was never beaten by his parents. When he did something wrong, his mother would get upset and cry.

At the age of five, he was sent to a Catholic school; later he went to a Catholic High School. There is no record whatever of any great frustration during his childhood. At 17, Henry enlisted in the navy. He served for a time overseas, then returned. He became a short-order cook.

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (AP)—Out of the ashes of the Second World War has come a new breed of American Negro—tough, restless, vocal, offering a powerful challenge to adamant white supremacists of the Deep South.

"It is a revolution in spirit, helped by education and what the colored GI saw and learned during the big war," says Otto McClarrin, a Negro from the South employed as information officer in the government's civil rights commission.

"Wherever we went in other countries, we had no trouble. We were welcomed as friends. No one in the Far East or in Europe took particular note of our skins. And that's what we want here—equality, especially in the courts."

Instead of equality, the American Negro in southern states is still subject to intimidation, still largely barred from exercising his basic constitutional right—the right to vote.

For decades the Negro cringed in fear of the white man's fists and clubs. To speak out against injustice or to appear in public places that the white man reserved for himself might have invited the lynch mob.

Times have changed. The southern Negro may still be arrested, even beaten up. But with the whole world looking on, the threat of death by violence is slowly fading—a sharp contrast to the 3,425 lynchings of Negroes between 1882 and 1946.

Armed with a new philosophy and political weapon—the idea of passive resistance inherited from India's late Mahatma Gandhi—Negro leaders are preaching non-violence as they lead their followers through sit-down strikes and boycotts.

But even passive resistance sometimes gives way to violent protest.

Results in the years immediately after the war were discouraging. The big break came in 1954 when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled segregation in schools unconstitutional. It didn't bring changes overnight, but it was a beginning. Some southern states agreed to school integration; others are still fighting it.

Then came passive resistance as Rev. Martin Luther King, a Negro clergyman, led his people in the 1956 boycott of segregated buses in Alabama. The Negro discovered he had an economic weapon. White barriers tended to crumble in the face of loss of Negro business.

There are still many battles to be won. Last year the civil rights commission pointed up the almost universal suppression of Negro voting rights in the South.

The government presented legislation in Congress to permit federal intervention in cases where the vote is denied. Although it was only a mild version of what the commission recommended, it nevertheless set off a round-the-clock debate by Southern Senators determined not to let the issue come to a decision.

Behind this resistance apparently lurked a fear of what the Negro might do with his vote. One in 10 Americans is Negro. In many parts of the South he outnumbers the white man to such an extent that freedom to vote would undoubtedly produce more Negro political representation and influence.

Organization is another source of Negro strength. Many look to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for guidance. The association has a membership of 350,000, including about 50,000 whites. Among the most prominent are Eleanor Roosevelt, President Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers, and Democratic Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon.

White some Negroes maintain that the current campaign of lunch-counter sit-down strikes is spontaneous, the pattern is so similar in all of them that some central planning is evident. Moving among the strikers was a familiar figure—Rev. Martin Luther King.

Rapist's Victim Bound, Slashed

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police said a 37-year-old woman was bound and gagged, raped three times, slashed with scissors and threatened with death early Saturday by a man who broke into her home and held her captive for 2½ hours.

The Car Corner

Car of the Year—But Why?

By J. T. JONES

Just one little thing after another...

I see the Corvair has won a citation as "car of the year" from a leading automotive magazine, because of its advanced engineering.

But I can't help thinking that, interesting as the Corvair is, the really sophisticated engineering went into Ford's Falcon, to make it—so very light and very simple.

To give you an idea, when they got through, the Falcon's cast-iron, water-cooled engine weighed just about the same as the Corvair's aluminum, air-cooled engine.

They reduced the total number of parts in the whole Falcon by hundreds. I consider the Corvair the car of the year myself, but for reasons other than advanced engineering—courage, for one thing.

I see the Falcon is out-selling the Corvair by roughly two to one. But General Motors is still happy. This is because Falcons are cutting into the sales of bigger Fords, but Corvairs aren't hurting Chevrolet at all.

Ford is selling roughly one Falcon for each two regular Fords. GM sells one Corvair for every 6½ regular Chevys. Surprised car of the year has been the Dodge Dart, which has grabbed 85 per cent of all Dodge sales, and ran ahead of Plymouth in the U.S. last month.

The Dart, as outlined here a few weeks ago, is basically a Plymouth.

There's big news coming up about Flats, but it's being kept under the hat for a few more days.

Chrysler Corp. has wrestled with the corrosion problem created by the snow-melting compounds heeded in less blessed parts of the country, and now claims the most thorough corrosion-proofing on the market.

This is significant here because we have a corrosion problem from a different source—salt spray.

The process, Chrysler says, involves nine different temperature changes, three metal cleaning baths, seven anti-corrosive dips, seven spraying operations, and 11 external paint-finishing operations.

Chrysler says the process should double the rust-free life of its car bodies—but I still advise against parking on Dallas Road to watch the big waves crash in.

Every now and then we give a thought to civil defence; and always reach the same conclusion: there are enough cars in Victoria to move the entire population out of town in half an hour. But the traffic jam if they tried would be a marvel to see.

So, if they believe evacuation is the answer, the way to make it work is to get busy now and train thousands of private motorists in convoy driving.

This is presented as a serious suggestion. Set up a planning group to organize the routes, and a training group to teach how to keep a column of its cars moving, and make the training compulsory for certain classes of drivers—say every male between 18 and 40 and there you are.

Arrests, Fights, Sit-Downs

By The Associated Press
Negro demonstrators in the South were subjected to new arrests and convictions Saturday as a result of their campaign to wipe out segregation.

Fifteen Negro college students were sentenced for participating in mass demonstrations at Orangeburg, S.C., and a state official expressed fear that such protests could lead to riots.

Almost at the same time, 40 negroes, including five newsmen, carried the sit-down protests from lunch counters to public libraries at Memphis, Tenn., and were promptly arrested.

A fist fight erupted between white owners of a store in Arlington, Va., and Negroes who sought lunch counter service. Two Negro men were arrested.

White and Negro sympathizers in six northern cities picketed stores of the Woolworth chain, which is on a boycott list of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Pickets also marched at the White House in Washington. They were college students, mostly from Howard University, predominantly Negro.

'Doomed' Patient Conquers Cancer

BREMERTON, Wash. (UPI)—About a year ago, Joseph W. Mayerle, 38, told his wife, "I'll be satisfied if I can live long enough to see the baby."

The baby was born Oct. 9, 1959, and Mayerle—whom doctors believed had only months to live with incurable lung cancer—takes care of the baby every day while his wife is at work. At nights, Mayerle works at a tavern, "and I can still lift a 150-pound keg of beer with the best of them."

NO SECRET

"Actually I don't have a secret," Mayerle said, holding his five-month-old son. "I just went home from the hospital last April, lived normally, worked normally and ate normally. Perhaps I ate a little more than normal. But here I am, and that's it."

Surgeons operated on Mayerle in April, 1959, and told him his cancer had progressed so far surgery couldn't help him.

Last Oct. 1, Mayerle walked back into the hospital.

"One of the doctors just stood there with his mouth open, his back against the wall and his face turned white. I asked him, 'Don't you know me?' He said, 'Well, you're Mayerle.'"

Mayerle had his last check-up only a few weeks ago.

"My X-rays were still clear as crystal—you can't even find the scar."

Research doctors have been studying Mayerle's blood.

"Apparently, they want to know what I've got that others don't have," he said. "I don't know if they've found out anything yet. I can't even find out what blood type I am. But if there is something in my blood that will explain this, I surely hope they find it."

Show Business

By Dick Williams

Breezy Jack Lemmon was telling me how he snared his Oscar-winning role in the film version of "Mr. Roberts" on the set of his new one, "The Wackiest Ship in the Army." It started in 1947 when he was literally living on peanut butter sandwiches and coffee in New York. He heard about the play holding auditions.

"Two thousand others and I stormed the casting office," Jack grinned. "That lasted four days, but I never got inside the door." He later saw the play on a pass and drooled over the part of Ensign Pulver.

Out in Hollywood eight years later, Lemmon was testing for a West Point picture being produced by John Ford, but the veteran director refused to look at the test.

Lemmon sneaked onto the set and ran into "some old bum with a beat-up hat, torn trousers and dark glasses." The guy glanced at him and said: "You're Lemmon and I like your work." Lemmon stared over his head and disinterestedly said, "Thanks."

"You should play the part of Pulver," he guy went on. Lemmon tried to edge away. "Spin your hand and shake," he ordered. Lemmon demurred, but finally agreed to the weird ceremony in order to get away.

"I'm Ford," announced the "bum," and you're Ensign Pulver!"

Here's Handicap For Oscar Derby

Classy Lookers In Strong Field

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—This poor but reformed horse player has long seen Hollywood's annual Academy Awards as a horse race among humans—a sort of Oscar Derby.

Here is the forecast for this year's race, with selections in order of preference:

BACON'S OSCAR HANDICAP (Probable odds bracketed) For Monday, April 4. Post-time, 11 p.m. EST.

FIRST RACE: Top Actress Stakes, fillies, purse $100,000 net to winner.

Elizabeth Taylor (5-2) Classiest looker in this field.

Simone Signoret (7-2) French-bred could take all.

Audrey Hepburn (3-1) Long legs make her contender.

Doris Day (5-1) Tab now for future starts.

Katharine Hepburn (8-1) Distance too much for veteran.

SECOND: Top Actor Derby, 25-year-olds and up, purse $100,000 added.

Charlton Heston (2-1) Has toga; will travel far.

Jack Lemmon (3-1) Tends to run wide at turns.

James Stewart (5-1) Plodder always close at wire.

Lawrence Harvey (7-1) Signoret colors may carry.

Paul Muni (8-1) Won it once before; tab.

THIRD: Best Picture Sweepstakes, purse worth million added boxoffice.

Ben Hur (6-5) Will overpower all in stretch.

Diary of Anne Frank (2-1) All-time classic filly.

The Nun's Story (5-1) One to watch this race.

Room at the Top (8-1) English colt ran well at Ascot.

Anatomy of Murder (8-1) German jockey may whip in.

FOURTH: Supporting Actress Stakes, purse $50,000, claiming.

Shelley Winters (7-5) Ran well eastern tracks; needs blinkers.

Susan Kohner (9-5) Classy filly could take all at wire.

Thelma Ritter (3-1) Often in contention but not here.

Hermione Baddeley (7-1) Too much trouble spelling name.

FIFTH: Supporting Actor Futurity, purse $50,000 added.

Ed Wynn (7-5) Old firehorse wire to wire.

Hugh Griffith (2-1) Ben Hur's chariots could carry in.

Arthur O'Connell (3-1) Almost won it last time out.

George C. Scott (5-1) Anatomy entry hurt chances.

Robert Vaughn (7-1) Best long shot bet of field.

Best Long Shots: Lemmon (2), Kohner (4).

SOUTH AFRICAN ART

South Africa's new National Art Society, opened in 1960 at Pretoria, includes Prime Minister Verwoerd among its patrons.

TV Licence Bids

Applicants Hint At Broken Pledge

TORONTO (CP)—The Board of Broadcast Governors yesterday heard two suggestions that some of the applicants for Toronto's new television station might, if licensed, later try to renege on some program pledges made this week to the board.

One such suggestion came from Rogers Radio Broadcasting Limited, the ninth and last applicant to make its oral plea for the licence to the governors this week. The company's bid was pegged to the program record of its radio station, CFRB Toronto.

GREAT PRESSURE
Joe Sedgwick, lawyer and a spokesman for the company, said that if one of the other eight applicants won the licence and found it couldn't fulfill its commitments—which are a condition of the licence—the BBG could expect great pressure to have its licence suspension power mitigated or altered.

Another similar suggestion came from Ralph Selgrove, president of CKVR-TV Barrie, who opposed two of the applications chiefly on technical grounds. He noted some of the applicants made some heavy cultural-program promises that showed "little consideration of the viewers' taste."

Veteran Scotland Yard Man Detective in Festival Play

A former Scotland Yard man who plays the part of a detective on stage will be one of the attractions when the British Columbia regional drama festival opens a six-night run here Monday.

Five theatre groups from Vancouver area and one Victoria company are seeking a berth in the Dominion Drama Festival to be held in Vancouver's Queen Elizabeth Theatre May 16 to 21.

Burnaby Little Theatre is entered in the B.C. festival with "Edwina Black," a contemporary English whodunit by William Dinner and William Morum.

Featured in the cast under the direction of Reg Bristowe is the husband-wife team of Brian and Freda Butcher. Before coming to Canada, Mr. Butcher was a member of Scotland Yard and he portrays a detective in the play.

The regional finals will also include the first appearance in a West Coast final of a French-speaking group and production, La Troupe Moliere of Vancouver, under veteran director Mrs. Blanche Lambert, will perform "Zone" by prolific Montreal playwright Marcel Dube.

Experienced direction will also be a feature of "View from the Bridge" by Arthur Miller. The Vancouver Little Theatre production will be directed by Ian Theobald, one of the province's top directors and a frequent contributor of radio and television plays.

Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross and Mrs. Ross are scheduled to be in the first-night audience, along with Mayor Percy Scurrell to watch the opening production, "Summer of the Seventeenth Doll" by Australian actor-playwright Ray Lawler, put on by Victoria Theatre Guild.

The story of two girls and their illicit relationships with two sugar cane cutters, it had a long run in London. Mrs. Phyllis Doolittle is directing the play for the guild, which has placed 10 entries in the Dominion festival in its 25 years of operation.

Tuesday night will see Peter Ustinov's comedy hit, "Romanoff and Juliet," presented by UBC Players' Club. The cast is headed by young Victoria actor John Sparks.

Wednesday will be Burnaby Little Theatre's turn and La Troupe Moliere will perform Thursday, "A View from the Bridge" will be staged Friday.

The festival closes Saturday with the Vagabond Players of New Westminster in "Come Back Little Sheba," the Pulitzer prize-winning drama by William Inge.

Brazzi Job: $15,000,000

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Rosano Brazzi picked a fine time to pay a return visit to Hollywood—right in the midst of the actor's strike.

He's here for a two-months' stay, but the strike won't keep him idle. He's doing a television show for the June Allyson Theatre and may do others—TV is unaffected by the strike. He has been talking to studios about future assignments.

"One of them will be a $15,000,000 production," said the Italian actor, who was cagey about naming it. Insiders suspect it is MGM's "Charlemagne," to be filmed in Cinerama.

"The thing I like best about the project is that I will not be cast, as a lover. Thank heaven for that! I absolutely refuse to play lovers again."

"Why? Because you say things that would sound silly to someone listening at the keyhole. When you say those things on a gigantic screen, your risk being laughed at."

Drive for Used Tools First Step Toward Outdoor, Heated Oak Bay Pool

Oak Bay Kiwanis yesterday launched a drive for used tools as the first step toward construction of an outdoor heated swimming pool in Oak Bay.

A flood of used hammers, saws, screwdrivers, chisels, pliers, wrenches, garden tools and more than 20 lawn mowers poured into the Oak Bay Scout Hall yesterday, collected from district residents by members of the Kiwanis Club.

Next Saturday at the Scout Hall they will be sold, and the money added to the fund for the proposed new swimming pool.

"We know you can't raise the kind of money we need with a drive like this," Kiwanis spokesman Jack Burgess said. "But it's a start. Maybe we'll get $1,500 out of it, maybe we'll be lucky and get $3,000. The important thing is that we are getting started, and we hope the people of Oak Bay will do their part and come out and support the sale.

"Maybe with this money we can get the preliminary survey work done. The estimates for the complete pool have been anywhere between $55,000 and $100,000."

The proposed pool is to be located in Fireman's Park. It will be heated, with dressing rooms, lavatories, walk-in foot-baths and all facilities required by the Public Health Department.

At first, plans call for an outdoor pool. Later, as more funds are raised, it will probably be glassed in. In the course of time the pool will probably be handed over to the municipality by the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club.

The club has been working on the pool project for two years and many cash donations have already been promised.

Lots of Fun Ahead

A summer of fun is in store for eight-year-old Paul Stevens, 4150 Tindle, one of 45 youngsters who bought bicycles at city police auction yesterday. Paul said he has been wanting a bike for a long time.—(Colonist photo.)

$1,500 Loss In 60 Days

Domestic dogs running in packs have killed and maimed many sheep, Metchosin sheep farmer W. H. Lock claimed yesterday.

"Fifteen hundred dollars worth of sheep have been lost to dogs in my district in the last two months," he said. Half of losses may be recovered in compensation from the provincial government.

SHOT FIVE

"I've shot five dogs myself this year," he said.

"Last year I lost $1,000 worth of sheep to dogs. I got $500 of it back in compensation.

"I lost one ram this year that cost me $100 alone."

STRICTER CONTROL

Mr. Lock called for stricter control of dogs running loose.

Colwood RCMP confirmed Mr. Lock's complaint. Sometimes three and four complaints a week are received from sheep farmers, police said.

NO POUNDKEEPER

But there is no poundkeeper to round up stray dogs in the Metchosin and Colwood areas and it is more or less up to the ranchers themselves to shoot unlicensed, marauding dogs, RCMP said.

Killing of unlicensed dogs is authorized under the Sheep Protection Act. RCMP urged dog owners to purchase licence tags and to take better care of their pets.

Spectacular collision injured four members of a family as the car on left rolled twice after impact at Scott and

Vancouver Alderman Bridge Tourney Star

Winning his second title of the tournament yesterday, Ald. Earle Adams of Vancouver is emerging as the star of the fourth annual "Totem Tournament" sponsored by the Victoria unit of the American Contract Bridge League.

The three-day tournament at the Empress Hotel has attracted 250 bridge enthusiasts from all parts of the Pacific Northwest.

Ald. Adams, who won the men's pairs the first day with fellow-Vancouverite Adrian Hicks, was successful in the mixed pairs in partnership with Mrs. Adams.

Triumph was lessened by having to share the title with Mr. and Mrs. Myrtle Howson and Mrs. Ann Gordon stepping in at the last moment to complete the number of pairs.

At the halfway stage of the open pairs, expected to finish early today, Victorians Dr. Simon Marinker and Gordon Rodger were in the lead with Mr. and Mrs. Merriweather of Seattle, runners-up.

The championship ends today with team-of-four play, the major event.

Another Crash May Bring Plea For Stop Sign

Residents living near the intersection of Scott and Ryan Streets are considering petitioning city council for stop signs at the corners, following a spectacular accident which sent a family of four to hospital early yesterday afternoon.

William and Eleanor Skibo, 2759 Belmont, and their two sons, Garry and Terry, suffered shock, bruises and abrasions when their small car was in collision with a large sedan.

They were treated at Royal Jubilee Hospital and released. Driver of the other vehicle, Barbara Ann Johnston, 1727 Feltham, was not injured.

Four persons on their way to a church smorgasbord at View Royal School were injured when their small car was struck broadside and overturned while turning across the Trans-Canada Highway onto Vickery shortly after 7 p.m.

James Wilson, 70, 349 Island Highway, driver, and his wife Muriel, 62, were treated for shock and minor cuts at Royal Jubilee Hospital. Mrs. Wilson was admitted. Their son, James Wilson Jr., 2943 Tillicum, was transferred to Naden Hospital for treatment of cuts, and his wife Marjorie was in fair condition at Royal Jubilee suffering fractured pelvis and ribs.

Occupants of an eastbound large car involved in the accident, William Lau, 6148 Grieve Road, Duncan, driver, and Jerry Zawerucha of Youbou, passenger, escaped injury.

"There have been half a dozen accidents here in the last four or five years," said Vincent Clarkson, 2770 Scott, who lives at the corner of Scott and Ryan. "A man was killed here last year."

"There are no stop signs at the corner. It's so wide-open but people coming both ways figure they're on a through street."

Mr. Clarkson said a number of nearby residents were considering petitioning for stop signs to reduce the hazard.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you'll print my letter. Maybe it will wise up some other foolish woman who is getting bored with cooking, cleaning, laundry, kids, PTA, church work and family dinners.

I had a short-lived, cheap affair—and I do mean cheap—with a neighbor. He, too, was married, but fancied himself in love with me (or so he said). I talked myself into believing that my daily existence was dull, that my husband didn't appreciate me, and what I needed to restore my youth and vitality was a movie-type romance.

After three clandestine meetings I was so disgusted with myself I couldn't bear to look in the mirror. He told me about five affairs he had had with friends of mine. I got sick to my stomach. I knew if he told me about them, that I'd be included on his list to the next one.

I told him not to call me any more and he said, "Don't worry, I've already got the next one picked out."

I'm lucky this affair didn't cost me my home and family and I intend to spend the rest of my days making it up to them.—NO SELF RESPECT.

Plain Blackmail

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a girl who is 15 and in deep and serious trouble. My younger brothers who are 11 and 12 found my diary. It was locked and they couldn't locate the key but they broke it open and read it.

There is a lot of stuff in the diary that I don't want anybody to know, especially my parents. My brothers are holding this over my head like a sword. They say they will give the diary back and keep still for $2 apiece.

I have the money but it burns me up to have to buy back something that belongs to me. Yet my parents would have a fit if they knew some of the things I've written. What shall I do?—SICK INSIDE.

Dear Sick: Don't give those little blackmailers four cents. Tell them to return your diary at once or you'll tell your parents what they are up to.

Far better to risk parental wrath than to cave in to the demands of your brothers. Paying off would contribute to the moral disintegration of your brothers and they would shake you down again and again.

Does almost everyone have a good time but you? If so, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "How to be Well Liked," enclosing with your request 25 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Clothes Make Your Man

Dear Mr. Juster: I bought a tuxedo shirt for my husband. We're puzzled by a small tab attached to the lower part of the shirt front. It has three little button holes. Every time he wears it, we try to find where it buttons on to, but can't find a logical answer—or place. I'm tempted to cut it off.—Puzzled.

Hold those scissors. The tab is there to keep the shirt from popping up—an irritating characteristic of most tuxedo shirts. By fastening this tab to one of the inside suspender buttons, the shirt will be anchored so that it won't keep coming up and meeting the chin. Suspender buttons on the outside? Simply sew one on the inside of the waistband.

Dear Mr. Juster: My husband has a light blue shark-skin suit coat which he keeps wearing with tan pants. He insists it's a sport coat and I've been unable to prove to him that there's a difference between a suit coat and a sport coat. Please tell him it looks dreadful so he'll quit arguing.—Mrs. J. B.

A sport coat is a casual garment designed for that purpose. It is generally tailored of lofty fabrics, although suiting cloths are used occasionally. However, it's more daring in pattern, cut along easier lines and usually is given special lining, button and pocket treatment. He's substituting a mismatched look for a casual one.

Dear Mr. Juster: Who is right? Recently you mentioned something about narrow lapels being an important feature of our suit styles and how trim they make you look. Yet I noticed a picture of the British Royal family and what was Prince Philip wearing? A coat with lapels four inches wide! Is he out of style?—J.L.

Kings and Princes can do no wrong! Seriously each country has its own style conception.

Dear Mr. Juster: I am writing a paper on the history of men's fashions. One of the things that I haven't been able to discover is why trousers are cuffed.—A Student.

Originally straps were attached to the bottoms of military uniforms to hold them down. Gradually these straps disappeared and plain bottoms became the fashion. However, it became a habit to turn up the bottoms to avoid snagging on rocks or catching in underbrush. Somebody finally got the bright idea of adopting a permanent cuff and thus a new fashion was born.

Wedding Waltz

A beautiful bride has the first waltz at her wedding reception with her husband. The bride is Sylvia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Knott, "The Rise," Topaz Avenue, and the groom is Mr. Dean Harman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Harman of Saskatchewan. The wedding reception was in the Club Tango. Mr. and Mrs. Harman will reside in Seattle. They were married at St. John's Church Friday evening.

Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Footner celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary today and will be at home to friends this evening.

Mr. Footner, former civil engineer in the Sudan and who served in the South African War, and Mrs. Footner, the former Norah Edith Biden of Gosport, England, were married in Leek Wootton, Warwickshire.

Mr. Footner came to Canada in 1910. Mrs. Footner followed shortly after and they settled in Wallachin, B.C. The stone house which he built there is one of the few remaining signs of that community. They have three children, Miss Mollie Footner, Mr. Vernon Footner and Joy, who is Mrs. P. Russell, all of Victoria, who will entertain in their parents' honor at the family home, 845 Mann Avenue. Their seven grandchildren will also be present. Mr. Footner's brother, Hubert will be flying here from Toronto for the occasion.

DAUGHTERS ST. GEORGE No. 83 will hold a social meeting in the K. of P. Hall, Cormorant Street at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 23. The group is holding a daffodil tea in the Douglas Room, HBC Tuesday, March 22 at 2:30.

Sister Attends Saturday Bride

A pretty wedding was solemnized yesterday afternoon in the Church of Our Lord with Bishop D. A. G. Rankin officiating when Suzanne Carol Walton, eldest daughter of Mrs. Bertram Walton, Vancouver Street, and the late Mr. Walton, became the bride of Mr. Richard Valentine (David) Snape, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Snape of 1120 Tattersall Drive.

The bride was charming in a frock of white lace over tulle with lily-point sleeves. A pearl and sequin tiara held her chapel veil and she carried white roses and freesia. She was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Roland Perrin.

Miss Barbara Walton was her sister's only attendant in blue lace over tulle with matching hat encrusted with blue and yellow flowers. She carried a colonial bouquet of white and yellow carnations.

Mr. James Leamy was best man and ushers were Mr. Brooke Stephenson and Mr. Brian Hamilton.

The bride's grandmother, Mrs. E. Jennings attended the wedding. A reception was held at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel where the toast to the bride was given by her uncle, Mr. Anthony McGowan of Vancouver. For going-away, the new Mrs. Snape donned a light grey suit with pink accessories. The newlyweds will reside in Victoria.

Made Life Member

An interesting ceremony took place at St. Alban's Church, Ryan Street when Mrs. E. J. Scott, 2625 Asquith Street received a Life Membership in the Anglican WA, the gift of St. Alban's Branch and of St. Martin's-in-the-Field of West Kildonan, Manitoba. Diocesan president Mrs. B. P. Harding read the service of admission, Mrs. A. Yeater presented the certificate and Mrs. J. H. Comber the pin.

Rev. W. J. J. Woods took Holy Communion following the ceremony.

Coffee, shelled nuts and chocolate keep fresh longer in the refrigerator.

U.S. Honeymoon For Newlyweds

At an evening ceremony in St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, Saturday, Marilyn Alice Carlow exchanged wedding vows with Mr. James Paul McColl.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. John D. Carlow, 2751 Avebury Avenue, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. McColl, 1760 Veda Place are the groom's parents.

Rev. J. W. L. McLean officiated and Mr. C. C. Warren was the organist. Mr. A. Stokes sang a solo during the ceremony.

The bride wore a full length gown of white delustré satin, cut on princess lines with V-neck and long, lily point sleeves.

A coronet of pearls and sequins held a chapel veil. Her jewelry was a necklace and earrings of cultured pearls. A single white orchid and freesia topped the white prayer book carried by the bride.

Attendants were gowned in pale green satin brocade. Their sheath dresses had matching overskirts and cummerbunds and their tiny hats were on tone. White was the color of accessories worn and all carried cascade bouquets of Johanna Hill roses.

Sister of the groom, Miss Moira McColl, was maid of honor with Mrs. A. Wells, as bridesmatron and Miss Eileen Grant, bridesmaid.

Best man was the groom's brother, Mr. W. P. McColl. Mr. Mel Carlow, brother of the bride and Mr. Roy Chappell were ushers.

A large reception was held at Holyrood House, following the wedding, Mr. D. Carlow, the bride's uncle, proposed the toast to the bride.

Leaving for a honeymoon in Washington State the new Mrs. McColl chose a blue boucle ensemble of sheath dress and jacket and top coat. A flower hat and shoes of blue and white gloves completed her going away outfit. She wore a white orchid corsage.

The young couple will make their home in Victoria.

Essentials Packed In Eggs

Just about this time of year most of us are in the doldrums when it comes to meal planning and when those plans must include meatless meals, the problem seems formidable.

In planning Lenten meals, fish is an important factor. King Neptune sets a bountiful table for us here in Victoria, situated as we are with the sea around us.

In our featured dishes today we give you both fresh and canned . . . halibut, cod, tinned salmon and tinned tuna. All are in the category of easy-to-prepare and all budget-wise fare. Each has eye-appeal with the gourmet touch.

When considering Lenten meals we mustn't overlook eggs. An egg, neatly packaged by Mother Nature, contains many of the essential food elements . . . protein, fat, iron, phosphorus, calcium and vitamin A and D. Too few people eat their recommended four a week. The variety of uses to which eggs can be put is endless . . . casserole dishes, souffles and omelets to name only a few.

And then there are the macaroni products . . . these too can be the basis of many fine meatless dishes.

Hearty Dish Neither Soup Nor Stew

From old Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, comes this hearty dish which is neither soup nor stew. Codfish Chowder is a mingling of good flavors, rich and satisfying enough for a family-style dinner feature. It is long on appetite and eye appeal and . . . a pertinent fact for a canny cook . . . low on cost.

Six potatoes diced, one onion chopped, one cup water. Simmer for about 10 minutes then add one-and-a-half pounds cod cut into pieces. Simmer for twenty minutes. Remove from the heat and add one-and-a-half pints fresh milk plus one-half tin undiluted evaporated milk, one teaspoon sugar, salt and pepper to taste and three tablespoons butter. Return to heat and let come just to the boil. Serve at once.

Slivered Almonds Top Salad

Our one cold dish today is a substantial noodle salad. For this it is nice to use fancy shaped noodles; these come in many interesting shapes . . . bows, shell, ribbon, etc. In this particular salad we have used the bow-shaped egg noodles, crisp cucumber slices, celery, chopped green pepper, thinly-sliced radishes and hard-cooked eggs. First cook four ounces of egg noodles in boiling salted water until tender but not mushy. Drain and rinse in cold water and chill. Now cut up the vegetables.

To make a salad that will serve six use one medium-sized cucumber, one chopped celery, two tablespoons shredded green pepper, about 10 radishes sliced paper-thin and three hard-cooked eggs. If you like the flavor of onion you could add a couple of green ones chopped.

Combine the vegetables and the noodles, toss lightly with your nippest dressing and garnish with hard-cooked egg slices. A clear glass bowl shows this lovely salad off to great advantage. Half the appeal of a salad is in its looks . . . do make it look pretty. For an added touch I like to sprinkle the top with toasted slivered almonds or toasted sesame seeds. For special . . . add a cup of whole shrimp.

Use Deft Touch in Seasoning

A deft and imaginative touch with seasonings, a deviation from the usual in the shape of things, brings you a zesty casserole idea to add to your Lenten file. The popular and ever-reliable canned salmon in a satin-smooth sauce with a biscuit topping hinting of delicate herbs and cut with a doughnut cutter gives us today's Savory Salmon with Herbed Biscuit Rings.

Flake and drain two cups pink salmon (a 1-lb. tin) reserving the liquid. Melt two tablespoons butter or margarine and blend in two tablespoons flour then incorporate one-and-three-quarters cups milk and the salmon liquid. Cook stirring until smooth and thickened. Season with salt and pepper. Lightly mix in two tablespoons finely-minced parsley, one tablespoon lemon juice and one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce. Last add the flaked salmon. Pour into a two-quart casserole or skillet. Top with herbed biscuit rings. Bake uncovered in a hot oven, preheated to 425 degrees until biscuits are done. About 12 to 15 minutes.

Herbed Biscuit Rings . . . just add one-third teaspoon of herbs . . . sage, thyme and savory combined to your regular biscuit recipe using two cups flour. Cut dough into rings with doughnut cutter.

Halibut Oriental with Hot Rice

A delicious tasting fish is not necessarily a handsome fish. For instance there is the halibut . . . much prized for its firm, meaty, white flesh but one of the homeliest of creatures. When cut into steaks it is most attractive and we can forget its ugly duckling live appearance.

Halibut Oriental is a sizzling halibut steak splashed with a piquant sweet and sour sauce. It makes a delicious main course dish. Accompany it with hot boiled rice, then complete the meal with peaches, almond cakes and tea. A meal with a Chinese flavor.

Roll steaks in seasoned flour and fry in a heavy pan in about a quarter-inch of fat, very hot but not smoking. Brown on both sides.

The sauce . . . combine one-quarter cup each vinegar and sugar, one cup each pineapple juice and water. Add one cup drained pineapple chunks and one-half cup sliced sweet gherkin pickles. Simmer 10 minutes. Combine three tablespoons cornstarch, three tablespoons cold water and one-and-a-half teaspoons soy sauce. Add to hot mixture gradually, stirring constantly until sauce becomes thick and clear. Serve over fish steaks.

Tuna Makes Appetizing Dish

Canned tuna is the basis of main dishes in increasing number because it offers such a store of nutritive values and is so convenient to use.

Here we have got, appetizing open-face tuna sandwiches. A tuna blend is spread on slices of bread, the slices are double-decked in a baking dish. Eggs, milk and grated cheese are added. Here is an enticing example of simple-to-prepare, distinctive fish-fare.

Combine two tins tuna with one cup finely diced celery, one-half cup mayonnaise, one teaspoon prepared mustard and one-quarter teaspoon salt. Spread the mixture on eight thin slices of bread. Place four of the slices in a slightly-greased shallow baking pan; top with the four remaining slices. Combine two cups milk, two beaten eggs, two teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, one-half teaspoon Tabasco. Pour this over the sandwiches. Sprinkle with cheese. Bake in a slow oven, 350 degrees for forty-five minutes.

Sharp, Tangy Creole Sauce Highlights High, Fluffy Omelet

What would we do without the egg? What a lot of good eating there is in this fine, highly nutritious food! Season the omelet with fresh or dried herbs . . . make a savory filling with mushrooms, cheese, onions or tomato . . . add elegance with asparagus or green peas or cover it with a piquant sauce.

Creole Sauce is particularly good . . . three tablespoons butter or margarine melted in a heavy pan. Add one-third cup each of chopped green pepper and onion. Cook until tender but not brown. Add one large tin tomatoes (20-oz.), one-half teaspoon Tabasco, one teaspoon sugar, one-half teaspoon salt and half a teaspoon of Accent to sharpen the flavor. Cook over a low heat for about half an hour or until thickened. This makes about two cups sauce.

For a high, fluffy omelet whip the egg whites separately. Individual or not more than four to six egg omelets are more satisfactory than very large ones. Use one tablespoon milk or light cream or water to each egg. Milk or cream makes a more solid-type omelet. If you like it slightly crisp and brown on the outside and creamy soft inside use water instead of milk and don't overbeat the eggs. Do not have the pan too hot . . . high heat toughens eggs.

Mrs. Louisa Fallows

One Hundred Tuesday

By EILEEN LEAROYD

One hundred years ago when the cavalry charge was the way wars were fought, when there were no telephones, no automobiles, no moving pictures—in short, before chivalry began to die, Mrs. Louisa Fallows was born.

In the passing of the century two major wars and a score of smaller ones were fought. We've survived the invention of the aeroplane, the Flapper Era, the Roaring Twenties, the Hungry Thirties, Rock 'n' Roll and the birth of the atom.

And so has Mrs. Fallows. She will be 100 years old on Tuesday.

The festivities have already started—as Mrs. Fallows' family gathers from other points, but the big party is Tuesday, in Sunset Lodge where she has lived for the past seven years.

It's going to be the great occasion it deserves to be, with most of her five children, 15 grandchildren and 23 great-grandchildren attending. Not to mention members of the WA and Salvation Army, who run the lodge.

HUGUENOT FATHER

Mrs. Fallows is the daughter of a French Huguenot father, Joseph Berry. He in his turn was descended from the silk-weaving Huguenots who settled in London. Mrs. Fallows is proud to report that her father was responsible for the design and making of all the flags of the Guilds of London which decorated the Crystal Palace at its opening.

COCKNEY

A true Cockney herself, she was born in Aldersgate Street, London, and in 1882 married a cabinet-maker who died in 1920. They had four girls and three sons.

One son, Ernest, in the Irish Guards, was killed in war graves and memorials in 1918; another, Herbert, died in Florida last year. The others survive, and they are Mrs. B. Roberts (Mary) who lives in England; Mrs. A. E. Jones (Grace) who lives in Parksville; Mrs. F. A. Laird (Kathleen) of Langford; Mrs. D. Buck (Louie) of Edson, Alberta; Mr. Stanley Fallows of Gibson, B.C.

It was Mrs. Laird who persuaded her mother to leave

War Graves Group

Commonwealth Note

OTTAWA (CP)—The Imperial War Graves Commission has had its name changed to the Commonwealth War Graves Commission by a royal charter signed by the Queen. The commission, established in 1917, has responsibilities for war graves and memorials in all parts of the world.

London and come to live in Canada, 40 years ago.

"I can't think of anything terribly exciting that happened to mother in her years in Canada," said Mrs. Laird, "except that during the war, in the dim-out here, she was knocked down by a car and broke a leg."

"Ah yes—and she did live with Louie for about four years at Great Slave Lake. Louie was a public health nurse then."

Obviously very proud and fond of her mother, Mrs. Laird said Mrs. Fallows writes all her own letters in a very steady hand, reads a great deal and enjoys walking.

"The only thing we worry about is the way she trots up and down stairs with no hands on the bannister."

Mrs. Fallows is a forthright kind of person to meet. She remembers all her friends, reads her daily newspaper to keep up with world events. For years she was an active member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. She contributes to leper work, often attends Shantymen meetings.

She keeps her own bank account and manages her own finances in fine, independent style.

CORSAGE

Saturday she had lunch with 14 members of her family at the Princess Mary. She wore a corsage and blew out candles on a huge birthday cake.

"I'll be doing this all over again on Tuesday," she said with a sparkle in her eyes.

She is obviously enjoying the fun and festivities.

—And why not? This kind of thing only happens every 100 years or so.

"After this," said Mrs. Fallows, "being 101 is going to be something of an anti-climax."

'The Bawled-Up Buyer'

It takes a bit of doing to get used to the faster moving traffic in Vancouver. We went tooling over the Lions Gate Bridge, high-tailing a truck, and the G.F. nearly pushed her feet thru the floor boards. I tried to look at a ship way down below... but you JUST CAN'T DO THAT on that bridge, 'cause some screwball is usually approaching you in the middle lane. "You SURE," she said, "you can wheel this thing thru the up-town traffic... you GOTTA get in the right lane you know, or you CAN'T turn off anywhere." "Be calm, woman... these one-way streets don't bother me at all... just fasten your safety-belt, and relax." Everything went just dandy till I got up there on Beatty, and I suddenly had a whim to turn right. THAT DID IT... a million cars & trucks were coming straight at me, the whole width of the street. They all screeched to a stop, and a grinning truck driver leaned out & waved his finger. "You shouldn't do that, Buster... NOT on a One-Way St. You Shouldn't." "She" had slid right down on the floor, & she wouldn't come out... too scared & embarrassed. Backing out, I bawled things up beautifully on the other street... but anyhow, we finally made it & pulled up in front of a carpet distributing place. "She" decided to stay in the car & try & pull herself together, while I went in, and began to haggle... working for ALL YOU out there, who would like to have a beautiful Fr. India Rug. I finally beat him down to MY price, by saying I'd take the whole pile. They are spray borders on Camel, Rose, Gold & Turquoise... all 12'x9'. "She" came in, and gave the nod, before I took the works, so come see what we got for YOU, to sell for only $199... It's Beauty... ankle deep, at

He and his bride will honeymoon in England, then fly to Canada next month.

Says Englishman

Women Drivers a Hit

Women are better drivers than men.

Who says so? A man, girls, that's who.

Jovial and handsome Victor Bridgen, 49, managing director of one of the biggest car-hire operations in Britain, is in Toronto visiting travel agents and rent-a-car firms here.

About 10,000,000 miles a year are covered by cars he owns, and he says women are the most desirable customers.

Why? "Because unlike men, they don't think they know all the answers," he said.

TWO RISKS

"There are two risks involved in renting out cars. Credit and insurance.

"Like any firm permitting customer credit, we have a number of bad debts. Drivers rent a car and disappear with it or bring it back and say they can't pay the charges.

"A woman driver has never, ever, done that when hiring from us.

"As insurance risks, women are tops. They are rarely involved in accidents, possibly because they tend to drive more slowly than men, but also because as a group, they are more careful of other people's property than men."

He said more men than women hire cars from his firm, but he has allowed for that in forming his opinions.

"Many Canadian girls, often

Victor Bridgen loves women drivers.

in groups of three or four, hire cars for trips around Europe," he said. "One group of stenographers covered 5,000 miles in five weeks."

Mr. Bridgen has visited Canada about a dozen times since the war.

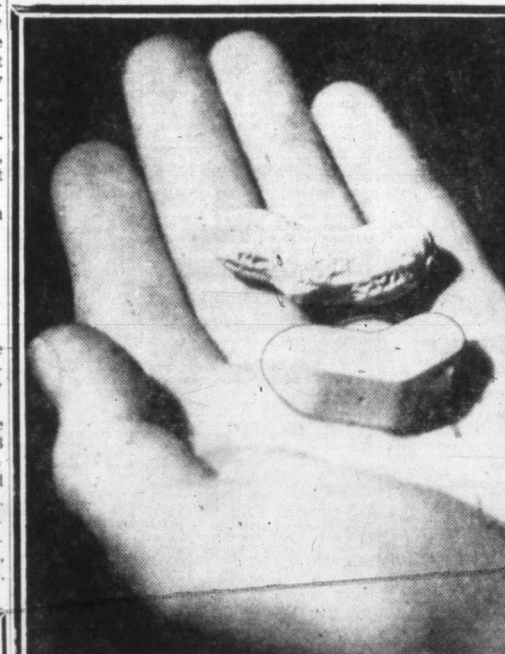

"Driving in Canada varies from province to province," he said.

"Vancouver driving is very, very good; Montreal driving is not so good; Toronto driving is well-disciplined."

He says he has only been in one car accident himself.

He ran into the back of an unlighted truck, in the black-out during the war.

Who was driving? A man, that's who.

Spring Calls For High Hats

My PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters)—High hats are the order of the day for spring.

Everything is up in the air with towering beehive and flower-pot hats worn over high-piled hair styles.

Another new effect is the curious combination of Abraham Lincoln's stove-pipe crown paired with Greta Garbo's slope-brimmed cloche.

The over-all treatment of spring millinery is destined to make short women look tall, while women over five feet six inches in height resemble animated copies of the Eiffel Tower. It is a season for fun and exaggeration when simplifying prettiness gives way to bold abstraction.

FOLLOW THE LEADERS

All Paris suddenly has decided to follow those two avant garde leaders, Balenciaga and Givenchy, who for years have been styling hats in the unlikely shapes of casseroles, bird cages and pudding bowls.

Dior shows chignon cages in enormous olive or dome shapes destined to fit over up-swept coiffures. These hats come in a variety of interesting media such as white pique, glaze leather, or rough, shiny straws.

They are featured in bright flower colors and are usually without trimming. Worn with simple, collarless necklines, "Miss Dior's" shoulders, neck and head emerge with swanlike purity through these smooth, uncluttered effects.

Ironically, Brigitte Bardot, who never wears a hat in private life, is responsible for another leading trend in Paris millinery. She pinned up her blonde locks for the film "Brette Goes to War" and appeared on the screen in masculine-looking motorcycle and parachutist's helmets.

DAREDEVIL THEME

Since then, her young fans have taken to helmet hats, poplin raincoats with expanders, and the heavy black leather gloves usually worn by motorcycle and racing car drivers.

A second theme in the Dior millinery evokes this trend with motorcycle crash helmets and modernized versions of a Persian warrior's helmet.

The mannish influence, already strong in the Paris millinery picture for the last two years, continues for spring with the new trend towards high crowns. Sombreros and ten-gallon hats, which appeared on the French Riviera for beachwear last summer, now invade the streets.

HELPS REDUCE

Deeper breathing, which results in a greater intake of oxygen, helps to burn up fats and aid a person's reducing program.

Real-Life Drama On Closed TV

By JOHN BARBOUR

NEW YORK (AP)—The television screen shows a highly-disturbed man, frantically pacing, wringing his hands.

For safety's sake, his room is bare, save for a mattress on the floor.

REAL LIFE

This is no television play or movie. This is real. While student doctors watch on closed circuit television a few doors away, the man, a mental patient, is under the eye of a TV camera in his room.

"TV is our microscope—our magnifying glass," explains Dr. Jose Barchilon of Yeshiva University's Albert Einstein College of Medicine.

The students can see in the exaggerated actions of the patient battling with his own mind the subtle, half-hidden behavior of less seriously disturbed patients.

This is just one way Dr. Barchilon tries to show medical students the unique workings of the unconscious part of the mind. He also uses an old spy technique, the one-way glass.

FOCUS ON BEHAVIOR

The patient is told that student doctors are watching from behind the large wall mirror at one end of the interview room. From the adjoining room, it is not a mirror at all, but a glass window.

Here the students watch and listen. Sometimes the instructor turns off the sound. With out the patient's words for a guide, students must focus on behavior for clues.

"Man was given speech to hide his thoughts," is a saying Dr. Barchilon likes to use.

Dr. Barchilon tries to teach his students that it is not enough to treat some physical problems without touching their mental, or emotional causes.

Dr. Barchilon tells his students of one woman who suffered migraine headaches regularly every two weeks. A doctor managed to cure the headaches, but later a son complained:

"It used to be hell every two weeks when she got her headaches, but it was heaven in between. Now it's hell all the time."

Siegfried Line Ends Filling Up Potholes

KARLSRUHE, Germany (UPI)—Demolition of Hitler's Siegfried Line is almost completed at last—50 years after its completion and 15 years after the war that ended its usefulness.

For 15 years, demolition workers have been blowing up the concrete-and-steel pill-boxes and the anti-tank "dragon teeth."

Now the last remaining stretch between Karlsruhe and Kehl—on the German side of the Rhine opposite Strasbourg, France—is being blown to pieces.

Hitler ordered work started on the Siegfried Line in 1936 as a bulwark against attack from the west.

Woman Tends Lighthouse

The lighthouse on Canada's Scatari Island is tended by a lone woman, Mrs. Eliza Campbell. About 75 vessels were wrecked around here before the first light was built in 1871. Mrs. Campbell gets her supplies from fishermen on nearby Cape Breton Island in Nova Scotia (lower left), and has tended the light since 1942.

McNaughton Agrees: High Arrow Dam No Help to Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton said Friday a high Arrow dam on the Columbia River would provide no added benefits for Canada.

The chairman of the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission said in the Commons external affairs committee that a high Arrow dam would only draw off benefits at Mica Creek farther upstream.

FLOODS CITED Gen. McNaughton was commenting on the statement of H. W. Herridge (CCF, Kootenay West) that the Castlegar, B.C., Chamber of Commerce has opposed high Arrow because of flooding it would cause.

Building of reservoirs in Canada instead of the U.S. would save U.S. taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars.

The general said that to get power development of the Columbia River started, storage reservoirs will have to be built first in Canada.

This meant that in the initial stages Canada would have to depend for its share of power on the power generated at U.S. plants on the Columbia through use of the water stored in Canada.

GOT TO LOOK

"The later starting period for power development gives us trouble and is the period when our negotiators have got to look after us," he said.

This was a reference to current governmental negotiations between Canada and the U.S. on Columbia River development.

Rhodesians Find Stone Age Site

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia (Reuters)—Experts will spend the next 18 months studying, sorting and classifying archaeological finds at a stone age site near the Lambo Falls, on the wild border of Northern Rhodesia and Tanganyika.

Excavations have shown that about 53,000 years ago, a primitive tribe made one of the first man-made structures in the world—a semicircle of stones to protect them from the wind.

The stone age site was found by chance on a hot Sunday afternoon in 1953.

Dr. J. Desmond Clark, director of the Rhodes-Livingstone Museum and an authority on pre-history, and a friend were investigating another site near Lake Tanganyika.

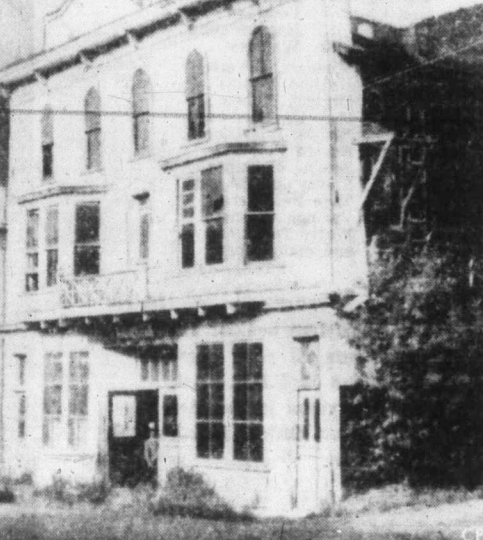

Sitting on the banks of the river just above the 726-foot-high falls, Dr. Clark noticed how the river had cut a deep rift in the bank.

Looking closer he found, half way down, evidence of a late stone age floor.

Enough material was gathered to show that the site was a major discovery. Excavations were begun in 1955 and Kalambo now has been visited by archaeologists from Britain and the United States.

A piece of wood believed to be one of the earliest clubs was among the finds in 1959.

Archaeologists found a number of hand axes, crude picks used for working wood, delicate flake tools, the equivalent of knives, and even the rock anvils used by the stone age toolmakers to fashion their flints.

Good Old Days Again

Sagging Nugget dance hall in Dawson City, Yukon, where famous entertainers appeared during the Klondike gold-rush of 1898, is being restored—false front and all—as a tourist attraction. Building sags, but plush in box seats is almost as good as it was on opening night.

Around Town

Men of 15th Plan Reunion May 21

Survivors of the 15th Brigade, CFA, meet May 21 to commemorate the departure of the brigade from Victoria for overseas service in May, 1916.

Reunion will be held in Loughheed's Banquet Club and it is expected that 75 will attend, some from as far away as Los Angeles and Prince George.

The unit holds biennial meetings and the death of Archie Gibbs, M.L.A., brought the number who have died since the last gathering up to 12.

Cadets of the Victoria Power Squadron created what is believed to be a record among Canadian power squadrons when 57 out of a membership of 59 successfully passed a recent examination in junior piloting.

The local unit, part of the Canadian Power Squadrons, was formed three years ago. Education officer is Garth Griffiths of the B.C. Power Commission and subject's taught include seamanship, navigation and engine maintenance.

Final results of a Community Chest poll of Victoria's opinion of charity fund-raising drives will be presented to a Chest meeting March 29.

A public meeting on matters pertaining to horse shows sponsored by various Vancouver Island horse clubs will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the City Hall council chambers.

Fewer Swine

Purebred Animals Show Increase

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's population of purebred animals is on the increase.

The agriculture department reports 1959 registrations totalled 189,425, against 186,811 in 1958 and 165,806 five years ago.

Only decline was in purebred swine. They skidded to 26,386 last year from 37,702 in 1958—the biggest drop for swine in any one year in Canada.

Cattle registrations more than balanced this setback, increasing to 116,643 from 108,969.

Let's talk REAL ESTATE

By JACK MEARS
NEW HOMES

We all know that new housing starts this year are far below the starts in the same period of 1959. This is largely due to the shortage of FHA funds, but in my opinion it is also due to a lesser demand for new housing than was being experienced at this time last year.

In support of this view, there are still a number of new, unsold homes in many areas. Some of these are still in the hands of the builder, but most of the unsold homes are at 6% interest.

Every year the automobile manufacturers try to "give the consumer something new to compensate for the increasing cost of this product." Some new, convenient, convenient, or we are offering for sale today are of the same design and offer the same benefits as those built five or more years ago. Do not misunderstand me. I am not talking about new architecture or the lack of it. I am referring only to the benefits of 1960 model homes, as against those of a few years back.

For the past few years we sold new homes in many cases because they have been easier to finance and buy than existing homes. I now feel we have not to show the public that we can give them new conveniences also.

For a start, how about kitchenettes? The design of kitchen cabinets has changed little in the past few years and a tremendous amount of usable space is wasted by nearly every builder which could be used for extra storage space.

Satellite Signals Margaret From Million Miles Out

JODRELL BANK, Eng. (UPI)—Princess Margaret last week switched on the transmitter of America's Pioneer V and heard its signals from 1,040,000 miles out in space.

The princess pressed the black button putting the transmitter into action at 2.25 p.m. and the signals bounced back 25 seconds later.

The princess' private visit to the giant radio telescope had been arranged before the launching of Pioneer V.

It Will Take Longer For Pilot's Licence

It will take longer to learn to fly after the end of this month, David Filby, manager of Victoria Flying Club, said last week.

From April 1 flying students will be required to take a 35-hour course, five hours more than at present, under the federal government's $100 subsidy scheme.

"There are only 12 more days left," Mr. Filby said.

Koreans 'Must' Unite Even at Cost of War

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—Vice-president-elect Lee Ki-poong said yesterday that South Koreans are determined to unite Korea again, even if they have to use force against the Communist North.

"We would rather die by marching north than live this way," the 63-year-old Lee told reporters.

"Unification by force is not an ideal goal at all, but the present divided situation is so miserable that to escape from our misery we think of unification by force."

French '400 Blows' Called World's Best

LONDON (CP)—A British critic says "Les quatre cents coups" is the best post-war film shown in Britain from any country in the world.

Paul Delin says in The News Chronicle the French film, directed by Francois Truffaut, 27, contains some of the most moving scenes he has ever watched in the cinema.

"Les quatre cents coups," costing only $100,000, is the carefully observed story of a child's delinquency, and the reasons for it.

Let's Decorate

Don't Take Gifts!

By BETTIE BRADLEY

Beware, young couples, or you will find yourself inundated with furniture and accessories that you wouldn't choose and can't use. But take my advice. It's infinitely easier to refuse the offer of second-hand furniture than it is to try to live with it.

Whether you think so or not, most gifts come with strings attached. The aunt who contributes an old table will almost certainly be insulted if you cut off the legs or paint it shocking pink. The mother who thinks you should have one big, old, comfortable chair (when you have planned on small-scale contemporary) will never really understand if you tuck it away in the spare bedroom.

In the first flush of planning your new home, you may well fall into the trap of wanting to please everyone. If you are weak now, you have begun the habit of accepting and will never be able to refuse gracefully at a later date.

Everyone will applaud your determination and good taste if you sit down with your husband, plan your furnishings and color schemes, and do not permit any interference.

With the very first offer from a well-meaning friend or relative, you might enthusiastically review your decorating plans and then, kindly but firmly, decide that your room wouldn't do justice to their particular style of furniture.

There is a second type of dangerous offer. You will certainly have a friend who has a chair that you are free to borrow—just until you can afford to get something that suits you better. These pieces that are on loan are a constant worry because of possible damage.

Furthermore, they are very awkward to return because you are saying, in effect, that you now own something more attractive. Far better to live in a sparsely furnished home—with furniture of your own choosing. Then gradually add both furniture and accessories as you can afford them.

Canadian House Exceptional

MANCHESTER (CP)—The Guardian says the Canadian house on display at an "ideal home" exhibition in London is an honorable exception in a trend toward "disastrous double-think" in architecture.

The "Canada Trend House" was planned by British Columbia lumber manufacturers in conjunction with the Canadian government.

Diana Rowntree, writing in The Guardian, criticizes the non-Canadian houses—excepting one Georgian model—for trying to have things both ways. The architects, she says, use timber to attract the young and brick to avoid offending more conservative clients.

City's Bright with Blooms—How About Sharing?

There's no doubt about it, Victoria is the garden city of Canada and the Pacific Northwest. A drive about the city these sunny days, shows masses of blooms filling almost every garden.

Of course, at this time of year, the daffodils are the most noticeable of all flowers and the gay golden blossoms make it a privilege to live here.

But not everyone can get about the city to see the flowers—people like the patients in hospital. The only way to let them share the city's beauty is to take the flowers to them.

And so, for the sixth consecutive year, The Daily Colonist is organizing its Share the Flowers plan. Gardeners with flowers to spare should phone

The Daily Colonist, EV 3-4111, anytime before Wednesday noon, leaving their name, address and telephone number.

And volunteer drivers are needed to collect the flowers Thursday morning. Anyone who can spare one or two hours Thursday morning should phone the Colonist office by 5 p.m. Tuesday. Gardeners who can deliver their own flowers should take them to the Colonist's downtown office at 1215 Broad Street, between Yates and View.

The flowers will be distributed among patients in Royal Jubilee Hospital, St. Joseph's Hospital and the Veterans' Hospital.

Daffodils will be the main flowers, of course, but any flowers suitable for display in hospital wards will be welcomed.

Tiny Space In Wreck Meant Life

EUGENE, Ore. (AP)—A woman gripped safety belt rings on the floor of an overturned car, with only four inches of breathing space, through 13 hours in icy water before her rescue Friday.

Red Chinese Warn U.S. 92nd Time

TOKYO (AP)—Communist China charged Saturday that a United States warship intruded into Chinese territorial waters off Fukien province. Peking radio said the Chinese government had issued its 92nd serious warning to the U.S. against what it called such provocations.

U.S. Tourists

Mexico Beats Canada

WASHINGTON (AP)—Mexico replaced Canada last year as the country where United States residents spent the most tourist dollars.

Reporting this Saturday, the commerce department said total travel expenditures by U.S. residents in 1959 came to $2,325,000,000, nine per cent higher than in 1958.

Mexico collected $345,000,000 from American travellers, not counting transportation outlays. Canada came in second with receipts of $341,000,000.

In 1958, Canada's receipts of $323,000,000 topped Mexico's by $4,000,000.

Nanaimo Boy

Rushed Here After Crash

Seven-year-old Robert Jones of Nanaimo, who apparently was struck by a car in Nanaimo last night, is unconscious and in critical condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The boy is suffering from head injuries and a broken leg. He was taken to Nanaimo General Hospital, then brought by ambulance to Victoria about 7:30 p.m.

Cut Forces 60 Per Cent U.S., Russia, China Told

LONDON (AP)—A call for a 60 per cent reduction in American, Russian, and Communist Chinese armed forces came Saturday from Philip Noel-Baker, British winner of the 1959 Nobel Peace Prize. The lifelong champion of disarmament addressed a London conference called to launch a disarmament campaign—financed largely out of his Nobel prize money.

Thieves' City Radio Haul Fished from Remote Bay

Sight of several Indian boys yesterday. The Indians were fishing radios from Saanichton Bay yesterday led to recovery of 13 transistor radios which were stolen March 6 from Butler Bros. store, 707 View Street.

City detectives, who took possession of other loot recovered after dark by two skindivers, said the recovery provided no new clues into the crime, in which $500 in cash, $634 in cheques and 35 radios valued at $1,200 were stolen.

A James Island ferry skipper, Walter E. Sidwell, told Saanichton police he saw three Indian youths fishing radios from the pier about 5:45 p.m. yesterday. The Indians were seen when police arrived. Police saw a number of radios lying in 15 to 20 feet of water and called for the assistance of James Quayle, 21, and his brother David, 12, both of 424 Viaduct, members of the Victoria Reef Divers and the Dockyard Skindiving Club. Wearing wet suits and some scuba equipment, the brothers dropped off the pier about 9 p.m. into the murky water. Lights on the wharf were augmented by spotlights turned downwards by police cars. Detectives declined to speculate on why the stolen loot was dumped into the remote Central Saanich Bay.

Assassination Story Seized

PARIS (AP)—Police seized Saturday's edition of the Communist newspaper L'Humanite, which said fanatical French army officers might try to trigger a world war with assassination of President Eisenhower or Premier Khrushchev.

Disarmament Breakthrough?

Conditionally Offer to Sign Policed Test Ban Treaty

GENEVA (UPI)—Russia yesterday conditionally offered to sign a treaty based on a U.S. proposal for a strictly policed nuclear test ban in a surprise move that Western diplomats said could break the 15-year-old disarmament deadlock.

The Soviets agreed to a U.S. plan of Feb. 11 that the United States, Russia and Britain sign a treaty to prohibit all nuclear test explosions except small underground blasts that are hard to identify.

ONE IDENTIFICATION

The Russians posed one condition—that the West agree to a moratorium of indefinite duration on the small underground explosions until scientists of East and West work out foolproof means to detect them.

Soviet delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin told newsmen later that if the West accepted yesterday's offer, a nuclear test ban treaty could be completed "in two weeks or a month provided there is good will on both sides."

In Washington officials promised a quick, careful study of Russia's latest offer.

VERY IMPORTANT

On the face of it, the Soviet action meant that Moscow was now ready to permit foreign inspectors on its soil, although it still insisted that their freedom of movement be severely restricted.

Russia's refusal to permit foreign inspectors on its territory has caused the failure of every disarmament conference since the end of World War II.

MUTUAL INSPECTION

Some Western diplomats, however, thought that yesterday's Soviet proposal might finally make it possible to start some degree of mutual inspection. It also raised hopes that Communists might be willing to accept some workable disarmament plan in the East-West arms talks that began here last Tuesday.

The United States has proposed last month that all nuclear tests in the air, sea and outer space be banned as well as all except small underground blasts that are difficult to distinguish from earthquakes.

SMALL TESTS

The Soviets accepted this proposal with the provision to the two western powers agree to a moratorium on small underground tests below a "threshold of about a 20-kiloton force explosion" roughly the force of the 1945 Hiroshima A-bomb.

The Soviet move came only a few days after the atomic energy commission had announced in Washington that plans were being made for a small underground nuclear explosion in New Mexico next January.

The United States and Britain have exploded no nuclear devices since early November 1958, in an unwritten agreement not to conduct tests during the Geneva test ban conference.

Western officials have detected no Soviet nuclear blasts since that time either.

Bogota, Colombia

Air Crash Kills 37

BOGOTA, Colombia (CP)—A Colombian airliner carrying 44 persons crashed Saturday in northwest Colombia. Thirty-seven of 44 persons aboard were reported killed.

The plane, a C-46 of the Colombian Airlines, earlier had sent a radio message saying it had engine trouble and would attempt to make an emergency landing.

It carried 41 passengers and a crew of three.

Ten Inches

Deep Snow Spring Gift To Halifax

HALIFAX (CP)—A storm swept into parts of Nova Scotia Saturday on the eve of the official beginning of spring, dumping up to 10 inches of snow and closing some roads.

The storm moved at speeds of up to 80 miles an hour from Cape Hatteras as Nova Scotia was recovering from an earlier series of heavy snowfalls. Serious drifting was reported in southern counties but most main highways were kept open.

Three Still In Tunnel

TORONTO (CP)—Three bodies still remain trapped Saturday in a sludge-filled sewer tunnel in suburban North York where a group of workmen were killed in a fire Thursday night.

Destroyer 'Brass'-Laden

Two Die, Some Hurt When Ships Collide

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—The U.S. destroyer escort Darby with several dignitaries aboard, collided Saturday night with a Swedish merchant vessel, killing two men aboard the Darby and injuring others. No injuries were reported aboard the merchantman Soya.

The navy said the Darby, which apparently suffered serious damage, was expected to arrive at the Norfolk naval shipyard today. The merchant vessel moved under her own power some four or five miles from the crash scene and anchored.

Canada-Wide Pension Pleas To Be Unanswered This Year

OTTAWA (Special)—Members of the House of Commons of all parties are getting considerable mail from constituents urging them to advocate an increase in the universal old age pension. Suggestions of the size of the increase range all the way from $10 to $20 a month. There is no likelihood, though, according to informed sources, of any legislation providing for a higher pension rate this year because of the economic conditions generally. The universal old age pension was raised in 1957 to $55 a month as one of the first acts of the newly-installed Diefenbaker government. Statisticians have figured that the pension of $55 in the fall of 1957 is now worth $53.31 in terms of constant dollars because of the rise in prices. The lowest point was reached last December when the $55 monthly cheque was worth $53.02 in constant term dollars.

BOB WHEATON AND MARGARET IWASAKI

Two Canadian Records Set At Provincial Swim Meet

By LARRY ROSE

Former British Empire Games competitors Marg Iwasaki of Vancouver and Bob Wheaton of Victoria established Canadian records Saturday during the B.C. Open swimming and diving championships at Crystal Garden.

Miss Iwasaki, swimming under Vancouver Dolphin Club colors, broke her own Dominion record with a time of 2:34.0 in the 200-yard senior women's event. Her previous record was 2:40.4.

Wheaton, a member of the Victoria YMCA team, snapped the Canadian 100-yard butterfly mark with a time of 1:01.9. Ed Cazalet of Vancouver Amateur Club held the former mark of 1:03.0.

TEN MORE

In addition, 10 other records were broken in the meet. Nine of these were Canadian age group marks while the other was a similar B.C. record.

Vancouver Amateur Swim Club won the meet with an unofficial total of 300 points. Vancouver Dolphin Club followed with 271 while Victoria YMCA was third with 217 points.

Victoria Amateur Swim Club, one of the surprise leaders, followed with 101 points. Vancouver YMCA had 40 points.

Outstanding performer at the meet was Wheaton of Victoria who set his Canadian record in the evening final after tying the previous mark in the afternoon heats.

Setting new Canadian age group records were:

1. Mary Stewart, Vancouver Dolphin, in the 100-yards backstroke event for girls age 13-14.
2. Aldy Meinhardt (Vancouver ASC), in the 100-yards freestyle event for boys age 15-16.

3. Cathy Campbell (Vancouver Dolphin), in the 100-yards backstroke event for girls age 15-16.
4. Vancouver Dolphin in the 200-yards medley relay event for boys age 11-12.

5. Bill Sangster, Vancouver ASC, in the 100-yards breaststroke event for boys 13-14.
6. Mary Stewart, Vancouver Dolphin, in the 100-yards butterfly event for girls 13-14.
7. Sheila Campbell, Vancouver Dolphin, in the 50-yards butterfly event for girls age 11-12.

butterfly event for girls age 11-12.

8. George Rust, Vancouver YMCA, in the 50-yards freestyle event for boys age 10 and under.
9. Shirley Cazalet, Vancouver YMCA, in the 50-yards backstroke event for girls age 10 and under.

Ron Wilson Takes Lead In City Zone Tenpin Play

Ron Wilson, one of the men who founded, babbled and developed the Victoria zone tenpin tournament into the last event of city bowling, last night took the first major step towards winning it.

Wilson, in his 20th year as secretary of the Victoria Tenpin Bowling Association, rolled along at a crisp 200 average yesterday to grab a 33-pin lead after the first six games of the 24-game championship tournament with a score of 1,200.

His effort put him in front in the 48-man race for the two Victoria berths in the B.C. championships. The tournament, which started on the Strathcona Bowling Alley lanes yesterday, continues today with six more games at Gibson's Bowladrome and winds up next weekend with six more games at each house.

Pressing Wilson yesterday were Roy Beggs, manager of the Strathcona lanes, who shot 1,167, and Ken Munn, the only two-time champion in the history of the event. Munn was 37 pins behind Wilson with 1,163.

Defending champion Wilbur Webb was fourth with 1,115.

Victory in Overtime Sets Up Semi-Final That Opens Friday

If what took place at Memorial Arena last night was to be a preview of one Western Hockey League semi-final, fans in Victoria and Seattle are in for some interesting playoff hockey. And the Cougars rate no worse than an even chance to carry on into the final against the winner of the Edmonton-Vancouver semi-final.

With nothing at stake, the Cougars and Totems came up with an interesting game which went into overtime before the Cougars were able to stretch their season-long superiority over the Totems on Victoria ice.

Don Blackburn, working hard all evening, deservedly earned himself the hero's mantle with a rather spectacular goal after three minutes and 23 seconds of extra play.

The big sophomore winger took a pass from Jim Hay at the red line, broke into the clear on the left side, cut in and rifled a shot past Bev Bentley just before he went sprawling into the end boards.

Result left the Cougars tied with Edmonton Flyers for third place, each club with 37-29-4 records for the 70 games. However, for playoff purposes, the Cougars are designated as the fourth-place club because the Flyers outscored them, 256-227, over the season.

With league president Al Leader cracking the whip, the Seattle-Victoria semi-final won't open until next Friday and if it goes seven games, the clubs will play three in a row twice.

First game is at Seattle Friday, the second here Saturday, the third in Seattle next Sunday and the fourth here the following Wednesday. If it goes beyond four games, it's tie Friday, Saturday, Sunday routine all over again.

Last night's game further indicated there is little to choose between the two semi-finalists with the winner likely to be the club which can break the homeice advantage. The Totems took only three points out of Victoria in seven games, the Cougars did only a shade better in Seattle.

Both clubs played it wide open last night with Totems, after conceding the first goal, coming back against a Cougar club which seemed to let down a bit to take a 3-1 lead into the second period.

GOOD CHOICE
But Paul Masnick, proving it more with each game that the Cougars were fortunate to get him as a replacement for Arnie Schmutz, got the Victoria club started in the second period. Then Seattle defenceman Frank Arnett turned Pete Wright's iced shot into the Seattle goal to tie.

The clubs played through a so-so third period, and Blackburn provided the rousing finish.

Gordie Fashoway, deflecting a shot by Art Jones, scored on a power play to give the Cougars a start and chalk up his 34th goal of the season. It is the 10th time in 12 seasons that the veteran left-winger has scored 30 or more times.

Bill MacFarland, Arnett and Guyle Fielder, who has his fourth straight scoring championship clinched although he will have to hustle in his last game, tonight against Vancouver, to reach 100 points for the fourth season in a row, scored for Seattle.

Seattle—Goal, Bentley, defence, Hunt, Sinclair, Arnett, Davidson, Howard, Fielder, McVie, Powers, Filson, MacFarland, Bollaue, Leonard, Gunnell, Christian.

The clubs played through a so-so third period, and Blackburn provided the rousing finish.

Gordie Fashoway, deflecting a shot by Art Jones, scored on a power play to give the Cougars a start and chalk up his 34th goal of the season. It is the 10th time in 12 seasons that the veteran left-winger has scored 30 or more times.

Bill MacFarland, Arnett and Guyle Fielder, who has his fourth straight scoring championship clinched although he will have to hustle in his last game, tonight against Vancouver, to reach 100 points for the fourth season in a row, scored for Seattle.

Seattle—Goal, Bentley, defence, Hunt, Sinclair, Arnett, Davidson, Howard, Fielder, McVie, Powers, Filson, MacFarland, Bollaue, Leonard, Gunnell, Christian.

DOUG ANDERSON
... repeat winnerARNIE SCHMUTZ
... most valuable

Schmutz, Anderson Awarded Trophies

To the surprise of few and the disappointment of nobody, Arnie Schmutz has been selected as the most valuable player for the Victoria Cougars this season.

The fiery little winger, sidelined for the season last month when he suffered a fractured skull in a game in Winnipeg, received a rousing ovation from the 2,900 fans at last night's Western Hockey League game when he came out to accept the Woodward Trophy between the second and third periods.

Schmutz was the choice of a panel of sportswriters and sportscasters and although almost everyone on the club stand considered for a fine team effort, he seemed to

Also popular with the fans was the selection, by the same panel, of Doug Anderson for the Wally Smith Memorial Trophy. This is the Victoria Cougars version of the Lady Byng Trophy and the veteran forward, having perhaps his best-ever season, certainly rated as the player best combining sports

Builder Has Run Out of Cash

DUNCAN—The builder of an English-style church near here is contemplating the idea of putting it up for sale.

"I've run out of cash and need quite a bit more before I could finish it," said George Turner, Norcross Road, yesterday.

CLOCK FROM U.K.
He brought Italian stone masons from Vancouver for the brickwork, bought a clock from England that was installed in a piked Norman tower and worked on it himself for more than three years.

"I've had a lot of satisfaction doing it. I've always wanted to build a church, but now I'm faced with the fact that if I can't get some money to finish it I'd might as well sell," said the retired businessman.

CHRIST CHURCH
Mr. Turner calls it Christ Church. It is a replica of a church with the same name near his childhood home in England. He hoped the church might be used for non-denominational services.

He asked that he be allowed to express his thanks to Herbert Cashman, Victoria; G. Max Bell, Calgary; Mrs. M. A. Turner, Ladysmith; Dorothy Abrahams, Victoria; Mrs. M. V. Jones, California; and G. A. Gahert, Montreal.

HAVE TO BE SOLD
"Unless sponsors will volunteer their assistance to complete the church, it will have to be sold. The funds derived from the sale will be used to build a smaller and less costly church in a more spiritual and co-operative locale," said Mr. Turner.

Sponsors are needed for shingles and their application, wiring and fixtures—a heating unit and its installation, materials for the pews and for painting the inside of the church.

DONATIONS ASKED
Donations will be accepted by the Bank of Commerce and placed in the Christ Church building fund.

Cowichan to Drive for Varsity

Duncan Editor Leads Island Chamber Group

PORT ALBERNI—Will Dobson, Duncan editor, was elected president of Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island on the final day of the forty-second annual convention here.

Mr. Dobson succeeds W. Wallace Baikie of Campbell River. Other officers elected were Eric Mallett, Victoria, first vice-president; and Russell Dudley, Nanaimo, re-elected secretary-treasurer.

DUNCAN—The drive for funds in Cowichan of business firms and residents to support the Victoria university building program will start early next month.

The start was announced yesterday by Cowichan chairman Dr. Raymond Duncan after a meeting of the up-island committee.

R. B. Wilson, Victoria, chairman of the fund, was "delighted with the response received in this area and was confident the campaign would be successful if such co-operation is received throughout the up-island area," said Dr. Duncan.

Committee workers appointed here and for the surrounding areas are: Lake Cowichan: Jack Saywell, vice-chairman, with team captains C. M. Reid, A. E. Irwin, A. B. Greenwell, Alan McMorland, D. A. Berry, A. O. Falsson and N. H. Webb.

Duncan: Dr. Duncan, general chairman, and team captains Mrs. Allan Meynell, R. M. Lendrum, C. W. Bird, Wally Stipe, Mrs. P. C. Boiston, Dr. P. E. Qualley, Mrs. Rose Richardson, Mrs. Jack Long, Harold Whitfield and A. D. Jones.

Cobbie Hill: Dave Todd, vice-chairman.

Gulf Island: Dr. Ted Jansch, vice-chairman, and team captains Dr. Harold Johnson, Gavin Mouat and Col. Don Crofton.

Insemination Huge Success

Cattle-Breeding Depot Hits All-Time Record

DUNCAN—Selective breeding of dairy cows by artificial insemination from the Malahat to Nanaimo has hit an all-time high.

The record was 2,157 first services with conception of eight out of 10 times for the year of 1959.

Actual 60 to 90-day non-return figure released yesterday was 79.44, said W. R. "Bill" Barker, secretary of the Cowichan Agricultural Society.

CALLS INCREASED
Service calls have increased 300 a year for the last five years. Breakdown of breed is: Holstein 1,098, Jerseys 537, Hereford 221, Guernseys 141.

Ayrshire 139, Aberdeen Angus 16 and Charbary 5.

When the artificial insemination centre was started for farmers in this area there were only 2,000 cows.

POPULATION UP
"Since then the cow population has gone up tremendously," said Mr. Barker. Records dating back to the dark days of the service in 1949 show there were only 419 calls for service all year.

Business finally became so brisk in recent years that the Cedar area was included because farmers there kept "pestering" officials here.

"The old complaint was that the farmer didn't want too many sires in their herds, which was justified. In those days you had to take the semen that was available. But now they can get semen from the best government-approved bulls and have it saved here on ice for them," said Mr. Barker.

Fresh semen costs $6 and frozen $7.50 a service.

BIGGER FARMS
"Only the bigger farms can actually afford a bull now. The cost of feeding, housing, insuring and the initial cost price all combined is prohibitive for most," he said.

Result of better blood lines introduced into the herds here has improved the quality and quantity of the stock and milk produce.

Semen can be purchased from the Jersey bull Bellavista Jester whose daughter Forest Glen Design's Eva gave 17,374 pounds of milk, 578 pounds of butterfat measuring 5.63 per cent during a 365-day lactation period.

That is quite a record for a small Jersey.

SOUGHT AFTER

Also available—one of the most-sought-after in the province—is semen from the bull Gilmore Valiant. At present it is such a select bull the provincial and federal governments are conducting a selection program across Canada, mating it with the best breed stock. All bull calves are to go to A1 centres.

Hit-Run Driver Loses Licence

LAKE COWICHAN—Robert Turney, of Summit, had his driver's licence suspended for 30 days in court yesterday when he pleaded guilty to a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

The charge also brought a fine of $35 when he appeared before Magistrate C. L. Anderson.

The charge was laid as the result of an accident Turney was in near Paldi on the Cowichan Lake Road last March 12, said police.

He also pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving and was fined $20.

Also fined in court was Albert H. Bedard, of Lake Cowichan, who pleaded guilty to a charge of speeding over 39 m.p.h. in the village March 15. Fine was $15.

Many Island Roads Urged by Chambers

PORT ALBERNI—The Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island adopted a half-dozen resolutions urging construction and improvement of roads on the Island but referred back to the sponsoring Alberni Board of Trade a resolution calling for a government survey for an orderly highways plan.

Adopted was the Alberni Board of Trade's own resolution urging the government to complete construction of the Alberni-Courtenay-Cumbe-land highway; Campbell River—that the government be petitioned to make available the use of Elk Falls-Gold River road to the public with an ultimate goal of having the entire road built to standard width making it safe for private cars during logging hours; Campbell River—that a survey be completed to establish the route for extension of the Island Highway to Port Hardy.

Campbell River—urging a trade between the government and Elk River Timber Company of a piece of road involving two railway crossings near Mirror Lake; Campbell River—urging that a proper survey be made to determine the shortest and most feasible route of the road from camp 8 to Upper Campbell River and that the highways department either get started on a new road or make arrangements for the use of a logging road in the area.

Tofino—that the Alberni-Tofino road be completed to highway standard and be kept open to the public at all times.

Drive for Used Tools First Step Toward Outdoor, Heated Oak Bay Pool

Oak Bay Kiwanis yesterday launched a drive for used tools as the first step toward construction of an outdoor heated swimming pool in Oak Bay.

A flood of used hammers, saws, screwdrivers, chisels, pliers, wrenches, garden tools and more than 20 lawn mowers poured into the Oak Bay Scout Hall yesterday, collected from district residents by members of the Kiwanis Club.

Next Saturday at the Scout Hall they will be sold, and the money added to the fund for the proposed new swimming pool.

"We know you can't raise the kind of money we need with a drive like this," Kiwanis spokesman Jack Burgess said. "But it's a start. Maybe we'll get $1,500 out of it, maybe we'll be lucky and get $3,000. The important thing is that we are getting started, and we hope the people of Oak Bay will do their part and come out and support the sale.

"Maybe with this money we can get the preliminary survey work done. The estimates for the complete pool have been anywhere between $55,000 and $100,000."

The proposed pool is to be located in Fireman's Park. It will be heated, with dressing rooms, lavatories, walk-in foot-baths and all facilities required by the Public Health Department.

At first, plans call for an outdoor pool. Later, as more funds are raised, it will probably be glassed in. In the course of time the pool will probably be handed over to the municipality by the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club.

The club has been working on the pool project for two years and many cash donations have already been promised.

$1,500 Loss In 60 Days

Domestic dogs running in packs have killed and maimed many sheep, Metchosin sheep farmer W. H. Lock claimed yesterday.

"Fifteen hundred dollars worth of sheep have been lost to dogs in my district in the last two months," he said. Half of losses may be recovered in compensation from the provincial government.

SHOT FIVE

"I've shot five dogs myself this year," he said.

"Last year I lost $1,000 worth of sheep to dogs. I got $500 of it back in compensation."

"I lost one ram this year that cost me $100 alone."

STRICTER CONTROL

Mr. Lock called for stricter control of dogs running loose.

Colwood RCMP confirmed Mr. Lock's complaint. Sometimes three and four complaints a week are received from sheep farmers, police said.

NO POUNDKEEPER

But there is no poundkeeper to round up stray dogs in the Metchosin and Colwood areas and it is more or less up to the ranchers themselves to shoot unlicensed, marauding dogs, RCMP said.

Killing of unlicensed dogs is authorized under the Sheep Protection Act. RCMP urged dog owners to purchase licence tags and to take better care of their pets.

Land Could Be Sold

Cowichan River Reserve Urged for Trout Anglers

DUNCAN — The department of recreation and conservation has been requested to preserve 13 acres of land on the Cowichan River as public trout fishing grounds.

The request was from the Cowichan fish and game association which is worried about the possibility the land may be sold and closed off.

The area designated as desirable is just downstream from the Silver Bridge on the Trans-Canada highway.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — Tenders have been called, with a deadline set for March 31, to build a $2,000 addition to the firehall here.

The 20 by 26-foot addition will be an office, storage area and meeting place for the Shawnigan Improvement district's volunteer firemen. It will be built on to the present hall.

Cost to residents will be about one mill spread over 450 properties.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — An inquiry will likely be held into the death yesterday of William Henderson, 77, of Cobble Hill, who died at Leechtown of a stroke.

Mr. Henderson was loading a lean-to onto a flat trailer with two other men when he suffered the stroke. No date had been set for the funeral yesterday. Next of kin are believed to be in Manitoba.

PORT RENFREW — Coroner Dr. E. C. Hart, of Victoria, has pronounced the death of a young man here a week ago — who drowned when his car went off the government dock — as accidental.

Dead is Leonard Thomas Hill, 21, a resident here, who was the driver of a car with four passengers that plummeted into 30 feet of icy water.

The driver was the only one who did not escape.

The accident occurred early March 11 when the car skidded while going ahead and bounced over a foot-high retaining plank and went engine-first into the water.

Scott and Ryan

Another Crash May Bring Plea For Stop Sign

Residents living near the intersection of Scott and Ryan Streets are considering petitioning city council for stop signs at the corners, following a spectacular accident which sent a family of four to hospital early yesterday afternoon.

William and Eleanor Skibo, 2759 Belmont, and their two sons, Garry and Terry, suffered shock, bruises and abrasions when their small car was in collision with an American sedan.

They were treated at Royal Jubilee Hospital and released. Driver of the other vehicle, Barbara Ann Johnston, 1727 Feltham, was not injured.

Four persons on their way to a church smorgasbord at View Royal School were injured when their small car was struck broadside and overturned while turning across the Trans-Canada Highway onto Vickery shortly after 7 p.m.

James Wilson, 70, 179 Island Highway, driver, and his wife Muriel, 62, of the same address, were treated for shock and minor cuts at Royal Jubilee Hospital. Their son, James Wilson Jr., 2943 Tillicum, was transferred to Naden Hospital for treatment of cuts, and his wife Marjorie was in fair condition at Royal Jubilee suffering fractured pelvis and ribs.

Occupants of an eastbound large car involved in the accident, William Lau, 6148 Grieve Road, Duncan, driver, and Jerry Zaverucha of Yubou, passenger, escaped injury.

"There have been half a dozen accidents here in the last four or five years," said Vincent Clarkson, 2770 Scott, who lives at the corner of Scott and Ryan. "A man was killed here last year."

"There are no stop signs at the corner. It's so wide open but people coming both ways figure they're on a through street."

Mr. Clarkson said a number of nearby residents were considering petitioning for stop signs to reduce the hazard.

Buttons or Bottles or Moustache Cups . . .

Collector's Items Just Take Up Space

I THINK there must be a bit of the pack rat in each of us. So I suppose collecting things is a phase we go through and are pleased to have recovered from. But for those who are still interested in collections, there is plenty of scope. From the small boy with his marbles to the movie queen with her precious gems and fur coats.

My first collection was a modest one of buttons. When zippers came in I thought I saw the handwriting on the wall and gave the buttons away.

Later on I fell heir to a very good collection of old coins, ranging from pieces so worn it was impossible to guess their age, to the tiny Maundy money, which is still paid out yearly in the Old Country — a gift from the Sovereign. But I find little joy in these "pieces of eight" and they are housed in an old coffee tin where they gather rust and verdigris.

I've saved stamps for so many male relatives it has kept me nimble picking them up, for they fell out of all sorts of receptacles in all sorts of unexpected places. But I've been told that one can learn a great deal from this hobby if it is carried out intelligently.

At one time I had a large collection of china pitchers. After that I collected shoes and had everything from a glass slipper to a Roman sandal.

One of my brothers gave me his interesting collection of Indian arrowheads and spear points. He had picked them up on his farm, or thereabouts, in Saskatchewan. These artifacts were hand fashioned from flint. My brother was of the opinion that the Indians heated the flint, poured water on the spot they wished it work and then chipped it off. The work done was very precise and skilful considering the primitive tools which must have been used.

The most gruesome collection I've yet come across was that of shrunken heads. A school teacher who taught for some time in South America brought them home with her and was most put out that her mother wouldn't allow her to have them on the living room mantelpiece. One little head, quite perfect and about the size of an orange, had black skin and black curly hair over a foot long. The head might have belonged to quite a pretty girl, for the features were fine and very regular.

A happier collection was one of old bottles (empty) owned by a friend of mine. She has them in her living room windows where the sun lights up their many colors and different and unusual shapes. She remembers where she found each one and they make a fine conversation piece. I have another friend whose hobby is collecting glass. She had a large room, pink carpeted, and when the sun pours in on her lamps, bowls, little trays and boxes of amber, rose, ruby, blue and emerald, the room looks as though butterflies had alighted in every corner.

Another collector I know, a retiring grandmother, oddly enough, has a collection of sword sticks and moustache cups. I do not admire either the moustache or the cups which go with it, but she does. She has found the cups now so rare that they are collector's items. I've tried to be helpful to her and this gives me an excuse to go into every antique and second hand shop I see.

"What have you in moustache cups?" I enquire, feeling a good deal of a fool.

"Just nothing at all, madam. We had two last summer, but one was cracked. But try the next block, in the antique shop, they had one a couple of weeks ago."

But of course, it's gone and so the hunt goes on. I've asked all sorts of friends and the answer is always the same: "Well, we did have one. It's around somewhere."

I thought I'd struck oil when one friend said:

"Yes, we have one and you can have it." Then she went on: "The only trouble is, we left it behind when we moved out of the Peace River."

My collector friend now has eight cups, two of which she brought back from the Old Country. But she has run into difficulties; she is looking for a left handed one and this she cannot find.

As for the sword sticks, they are quite a good idea for anyone travelling, a lonely country road. The sword is encased in a cane. If a marauder was poked in the midriff with it, he would naturally try to pull away. This would merely remove the outer covering, leaving you with your sword in your hand; the business end in exactly the right spot for ending the business.

But the most joyous collection I ever had was a collection of hats. I wouldn't have had them if we hadn't decided to take down the old fence. The fence had an end post decorated by a large, round knob, on a square, solid base. I saw the possibilities at once. I planned the thing down until the measurements matched those of my head. Then I sandpapered it off and made a cheesecloth covering for it and painted on a face. The only good thing about that face was that it distinguished the back from the front. But from there on I had a hat block and from there on I manufactured hats to go with everything I had and a few things I hoped for. Some of them were the merest confections, the size of a saucer, with a rose dead centre. But some of them were wide and glamorous and I loved them all. I shall always remember with delight the summer I had 14 hats.

But now, the thing I like best to collect is space. It's so lovely to look at, all empty of things that have to be dusted, polished, tidied up, wrapped, de-mothed, or tended in any way. If the space age is just around the corner, I'm all for it, but I'll take mine here and now.

Got $1 Without 'Et Ind. Imp'?

IN PHYSICS, science, mathematics and so on, there are innumerable laws but until this week there seemed a scarcity of laws in numismatics — other than the law of supply and demand.

It was this week that I discovered Klenman's Law — devised by Allan Klenman, popular past-president of Victoria Numismatic Society. It is simply "The rarities of tomorrow are the coins that numismatists preserve today."

And as an illustration, Mr. Klenman shows a 1948 Canadian silver dollar, in brilliant, uncirculated condition, which sells today for something like $100.

It was the first Canadian silver dollar issued after India won its independence and for the first time the words "Et Ind. Imp." are missing.

With the independence of India, the words — latin abbreviations for "And Emperor of India" — had to be omitted from Commonwealth coins and the new dies for the Canadian silver dollar were made at the Royal Mint in London, England.

But the Royal Mint was slow in making them and they didn't arrive in Canada until 1948 had well started. As a result relatively few of them were minted.

And most of them were put into general circulation, which drops their value to collectors immediately. Mr. Klenman had to write four or five times to get his copy from the Canadian mint.

But there you are . . . There are very few 1948 silver dollars in brilliant, uncirculated condition, and they are rare today.

You may be able to find a 1948 silver dollar in your neighborhood bank, but it is unlikely that you will find one in a condition good enough to bring a high price. The big money is reserved for perfect coins.

The moral of the story is that collectors should jump right in when something different is coming in coins, and be persistent until they get what they want. It pays off.

KLENMAN'S LAW seems to have mainly a local acceptance among collectors. A current illustration is the new French five-franc piece — pure silver, and the first silver coins France has issued for almost 40 years.

Some 10 collectors in Victoria have them, the only ones probably in Canada. Once again, they are all in brilliant, uncirculated condition.

Being of the first issue, they won't lose value, and the chances are that they will rise sharply as France is letting very few of these coins out of the country.

France is quite short of silver and intends filling the needs of its own people before bothering too much about sending copies outside its borders. The coin, as might be expected, is a work of art — only appropriate for the country which first produced the pantograph (reducing) lathe which is now universally used to cut dies for coins.

The heads side — the obverse — shows the figure of Liberty sowing seed and walking towards the rising sun. This is the familiar figure which symbolizes the French revolution.

This figure has been used extensively before, both on French stamps and coins, and is quite well known.

The reverse has a finely engraved motif of wheat, oak leaves and flowers intertwined with the motto of the French Republic — "Liberte, Egalite et Fraternite" — in a circle around it.

Around the edge of the coin is another unusual feature — the words "Liberte, Egalite et Fraternite" are repeated in RAISED letters, with raised raised stars between them.

The use of letters, words or designs in place of the usual milled edge, such as Canadian coins use, is not too unusual, but more often than not the letters or words are impressed into the edge.

There's a Fat Profit

By TED SHACKLEFORD

The new coin is an integral part of the huge revaluation program undertaken by France in an attempt to bolster its reputation with the world's financial leaders.

It is worth the equivalent of 125 of the francs which France was using up until the end of last year.

THE FRANC at one time was worth about 24 Canadian cents, but over the years, with inflation, it dropped to a value of about 1/4 of a cent.

The revaluation now brings it back up to about 25 cents. The new silver five-franc piece is, in effect, very similar to our silver dollar, although it is only about the size of a 50 cent piece.

France, of course, is not a country to take willingly or readily to a "heavy" franc to replace the lightweight franc its citizens have become used to — even resigned to.

The system devised to get the new, more valuable currency into general circulation is something that seems to be working well in France — though Canadians might rebel at such a scheme and stage their own revolution.

Taking a geographical district at a time, treasury officials and police, helped by school children, rope off the entire area, bottling the residents in, and then go from house to house, store to store, person to person, exchanging the new money for old.

Something like Aladdin's wife and the lamp merchant, but the French government's exchange doesn't make as much difference as the exchange of Aladdin's lamp.

Let's face it. If you have 10 silver dollars and bread is ten silver dollars a loaf, what do you gain if you call your coins 100 dollar pieces and the price of bread rises at the same time to $100 a loaf?

It does, however, make a difference outside the country, and that is what France is aiming at.

First on the week's program is the Victoria Theatre entry "Summer of the tenth Doll," originally produced under the direction Phyllis Dulmage at the ham Court Theatre from ember 14 to 21, 1959.

B.C. Drama Groups Open Regional Finals

FOR THE NEXT SIX nights, starting tomorrow, there is excitement on the Victoria stage as finalists in the regional Dominion Drama Festival compete for a chance to bid for the national trophies—including the Calvert award of $1,000 for the best presentation of a full length French or English play.

James Dean will adjudicate at Oak Bay Junior High School, and his selection will go to Vancouver's Queen Elizabeth Theatre for the Dominion final, May 16-21.

It is obvious that the Dominion Drama Festival, in common with all other festivals, divides into two parts; namely, the plays themselves on the one hand and the machinery that produces them on the other. These two parts are interdependent but, at the same time, very distinct. But the function of the former is solely entertainment, a simple enough point but one which educational authorities sometimes seem inclined to forget. And the quite indispensable functions of the latter are to arrange, select, advise, keep books, appoint, elect, assemble, disperse, publicize, promote, plan and perform other chores of a generally far more practical and mundane nature. It is further a point that, whereas the individual plays continue throughout whatever progress they may achieve to represent just one locality, the Dominion Drama Festival is concerned with all Canada and the furtherance of theatre anywhere within a land area exceeding 3½ million square miles.

But, to the public, as to Hamlet, "the play's the thing" even though it be for different reasons. We are not all out to catch the conscience of a king. So, for the time being, a glance at next week's program is the most important item on the agenda.

First on the week's program is the Victoria Theatre Guild entry "Summer of the Seventeenth Doll," originally produced under the direction of Phyllis Dymally at the Langham Court Theatre from November 14 to 21, 1959.

"Summer of the Seventeenth Doll" is a drama by Ray Lawler. Inasmuch as it is the first play in the history of Australian theatre to achieve an international reputation and international esteem, it may be said to be unique. Inasmuch as it portrays very familiar emotions, known the world over but in a quite unfamiliar scene and setting, it is different. It was a success both in London and New York.

The Theatre Guild provides a very strong cast indeed. It has Marlene Dixon as "Bubba Ryan," and Marlene has been a best actress both in British Columbia and in Alberta. Her greatest asset—and this is THE greatest asset any player can possess—is her complete success in making her artistry "so much a part of her and not something assumed for the occasion." Her ingenue role as Bubba Ryan is relatively unimportant; her playing of it could well be as important artistically as anything to be seen in the Festival. To emend Stanislavsky: "There are no small parts for a great player."

Another B.C. best actress, this time in the Island finals of 1958, is Elizabeth Mayne. She plays "Olive Leech," a barmaid who remains faithful to one man over the extended period of 16 years. Her boy friend is "Roo Webber," played by Richard Litt. No one will ever know why the two of them failed to consummate matters by the simple expedient of getting married except that, if they had, there wouldn't have been much play left.

Terrance Murray plays "Barney Ibbot" who is referred to in those documents known as publicity "blurbs" as "a swaggering, little gamecock." This he may well be but that is not all. He is one of the types undoubtedly responsible for the "population explosion" that causes some sociological disquietude these days and should cause a lot more.

Anabel Cranstoun, who did a particularly excellent job of acting in "Castle in the Air" a while back, plays "Pearl Cunningham," a much more logical sort of barmaid than "Olive." This she did last November with studied skill, controlling the ebb and flow of her self-assurance deftly and consistently.

Dorothy Dunbar is "Emma Leech" and Jim Cosh, best senior actor in the Schools' Drama Festival of 1959, is "Johnnie Dowd."

"Summer of the Seventeenth Doll" professes a backstage crew more than twice the numerical size of the cast. While this may not prove to be an exceptional state of affairs, it does emphasize that the play has been accorded every possible, expert attention.

On Tuesday evening, barmaids and cane-cutters give place to a more elevated stratum of society, peopled with such as a general, a president and ambassadors. From the continent of Australia the centre of activity removes to the smallest country in Europe. This, incidentally, is no known country like Andorra, San Marino or Luxembourg: it is quite mythical. It is like nothing as much as a concentrated segment of Mr. Leacock's "larger lunacy."

The play is "Romanoff and Juliet" by that singularly astute and witty contemporary playwright and actor, Peter Ustinov.

It is a comedy if not, at times, sheer farce. The New York "Daily News" labelled it "a hilarious cartoon of diplomacy," at least in part. The main burden concerns the efforts, sometimes friendly and sometimes otherwise, of a Russian and an American envoy to secure an alliance with the tiny country which occupies very strategic territory. But, while the ministers plenipotentiary are engaged in skirmishes and clashes on the diplomatic front, Cupid infiltrates both positions to the point where "Romanoff," the Russian ambassador's son, and "Juliet," the American ambassador's daughter, become serious casualties.

The part of "The General" in "Romanoff and Juliet" is carried by John Sparks who is not only a Victorian but one very well known in theatrical circles. His last appearance here was in the lead part of Brandon Thomas's famous "Charley's Aunt," with the UBC Players. But long before he left Victoria John had carved himself a niche in the local theatre which was broad and deep.

And so to Wednesday. Having sampled a drama and a broad comedy, the audience is now offered the taste of a melodrama when the Burnaby Little Theatre presents "Edwina Black," by William Dinner and William Morum.

This is a play of invention and suspense. Insofar as the dramatic personae and the plot in general are concerned, it seems to bear strong resemblance to Huxley's "The Gioconda Smile," performed not so long ago by the Victoria Theatre Guild. But the approach and treatment differ.

"Edwina" herself does not appear. She has shuffled off this mortal coil and there is suspicion that the shuffling process was aided by a person or persons unknown, either her husband or her former companion. In consequence, the assistance of Scotland Yard is invoked with what results may, in due course, appear.

This should be an interesting offering because the English brand of mystery is generally a great deal more mysterious than others. They do not rely on mayhem and caterwauling for effect. They pay more attention to detail, favor plot over personality and avoid patent anomalies. They usually come up as mighty neat packages.

And, in this instance, there is an added attraction. The part of "Henry Martin" of the CID is played by Brian Butcher who was formerly an officer of that dignified investigative agency. The added attraction lies not in any extra bits of authenticity that Mr. Butcher may bring to the part but rather in noting whether a real, honest-to-goodness Scotland Yard detective is as good on the stage as on the job.

The part of "Ellen" in "Edwina Black" is played by Freda Butcher, who is the wife of Brian. "Elizabeth Graham" is Christine Best and Peter Statner plays "Gregory Black," widower of the late lamented "Edwina."

The second half of the week opens with an emergency call for French Dictionaries.

The play is "Zone," by Canadian playwright Marcel Dubé, and it is performed by La Troupe Moliere of Vancouver. This is the first time that a French-speaking group has entered the B.C. Regional of the Dominion Drama Festival and, hence, the first time such a group has attained the finals.

The cast is young and the story concerns young people involved in trafficking black market cigarettes in Montreal's East End.

The lead part is that of Direction is by Blanche Lambert, with set designs by Jean Marc Hebert of Radio Canada and "Le Theatre du Nouveau Monde."

On Friday the Vancouver Little Theatre presents Arthur Miller's "A View from the Bridge."

A synopsis states that it concerns "a longshoreman torn by an emotional conflict that he does not understand concerning his adopted child, a niece." This, of course, is a sad distortion of whatever the truth may happen to be because no one has emotions they do not understand. People only employ emotions they do understand. The reasons prompting the emotions are frequently mistaken—not the emotions themselves—and these reasons are, in point of fact, what the play concerns.

It is motive and not emotion that stamps a play as a classic and, while it is no great task for a good actor to portray emotions which even he has misinterpreted, it is virtually an impossibility to play a character any part of which is not understood.

Ian Thorne directs "A View from the Bridge" and there is a large cast including Al Kozlik, Pat Barlow, Pegi Lynds, Richard Barker, Richard Pierrepont, William Mills, John Stark, Barney O'Sullivan, Ken McIntyre and Art Celli.

The week's program concludes with another drama, "Come Back, Little Sheba," by William Inge, "the story of a deep-seated frustration in marriage, and of its inevitable and furious eruption." As "Lola" in this play, Shirley Booth won no fewer than three major theatrical awards and Sidney Blackmer, as "Doe," carried off the coveted Antoinette Perry award.

"Come Back, Little Sheba" is presented by the Vagabond Players of New Westminster.

CALL it what you will! The steam bath has persisted through the ages. Under the ashes covering Pompeii, steam baths whose elegance rivals the Turkish baths of our times, have been found. The American Indians had steam baths, too. And until quite recently it was not difficult to find sweat-houses on most Indian reserves in the Interior. Up north there still may be a few around.

But they are rapidly vanishing.

The wis'al, to use the Salish name, was usually a low dome-shaped, wattle structure covered with sacking or some material to make it more or less steam tight. There would be two or three crude couches along its walls and in the centre a depression to hold heated rocks.

When a sweat bath was wanted a fire was built outside and in it round rocks were heated. When hot they were forked inside. After the bathers entered the wis'al the curtain was drawn over the entry and water splashed over the glowing rocks. For perhaps half an hour the bathers sweated in the hot steamy air, scrubbing themselves, from time to time, with handfuls of cedar fronds. When the steaming and scrubbing was done the bathers ducked into the nearby creek or in winter just rolled in a snowbank.

In the Kalevala, epic poem of Finland, Runo XXIII, Osmotar instructs a young bride in household duties which include the preparation of the steam bath. These are her words:

"When the evening bath is wanted,

Fetch the water and the bath-whisks,

Have the bath-whisks warm and ready,

Fill them full with steam the bathroom.

Do not take too long about it,

Do not loiter in the bathroom."

So sang the bards of Finland 1,000 years ago.

ON THE WEST COAST THERE'S UNITY

SHARING of their respective places of worship by members of two different religious denominations has solved the church shortage problem on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

Years ago, Archbishop Harold Sexton graciously gave his consent to a request made by Rev. John W. Leighton, West Coast Anglican missionary, that the facilities of Tofino's St. Columba's Church, and Ucluelet's St. Aidan's-on-the-Hill, be placed at the disposal of visiting missionaries of the United Church of Canada, which also maintains a West Coast mission.

The privilege has long been enjoyed by the United Church congregations and services and Sunday school are regularly held in both churches. By way of reciprocating, the ladies' auxiliaries of the United Church conduct bazaars, teas, home-cooking, sales of work and other fund-raising schemes which help provide for the maintenance of the two churches.

The arrangement was recently extended to Tahsis, but in reverse, and last month, at the invitation of the Rev. A. Howie, United Church minister, Mr. Leighton conducted service in his church. Anglicans are building their own church at Tahsis, but it is not expected to be completed until late this summer.

West Coast missionary for the United Church is the Rev. John P. Romeril, only recently out from England, and who makes his headquarters at Baillfield. His territory includes the smaller communities on Barkley Sound and as far north as Nootka. Mission boat is the 65-foot Melvin Swartout, named after the first Protestant missionary on the West Coast—in the days when Indian canoes were the only means of transportation.

In communities where there is no place of worship, both churches conduct their services in halls and schoolrooms. And at the more isolated places where the Melvin Swartout calls, they are held on board the ship.

The Tofino church, was built in 1912 and named St. Columba's after one of the early British missionaries. The mission was provided from funds bequeathed by a resident in England who stipulated that the church be erected on the most beautiful part of the West Coast. It accordingly stands on a commanding site overlooking Tofino Inlet, with Clayoquot, Lone Cone and Catface mountains in the distance. St. Aidan's-on-the-Hill, at Ucluelet, was built 15 years later.

Mr. Leighton was born at Bristol, England; was ordained at Southwell and served as a padre with the 27th Division of the British Salonika Forces in the First World War. He came to Canada in 1926 and prior to going to the West Coast in 1930, was vicar-in-charge of St. Alban's, Victoria. Five years later he was appointed to the mission to seamen in Vancouver. He planned to retire in 1955, but was persuaded by Bishop Sexton to resume his charge at Tofino and has been there ever since.

Victoria-Born Brothers Taught San Francisco to Beat

By GINNIE BEARDSLEY

IT'S PRETTY GENERALLY conceded that San Francisco, Victoria's senior by about three-quarters of a century, is a place whose citizens have developed the fine art of living to an unusually high point. Yet it took two Victoria-born brothers, whose father once herded his cows along what is now Bay Street, to show San Franciscans such a pleasant new way of city life that many paused in their scramble for a few square yards of suburbia, and now live in perfect contentment just beyond Twin Peaks—at Stonestown.

Ellis and Henry Stoneson, builders of the city within a city, which has become the model for community-planners from all over the world, were the sons of an Icelandic couple named Thurston and Ingeborg Stoneson, who settled in Victoria a few years before the turn of the century. It is probable that Ellis, at least, got his first taste of construction work as helper on the Todd cannery at Sooke, when he returned to visit relatives during school holidays after the family had moved to the state of Washington.

It was in Blaine that the brothers first went into business as very small-time contractors; and it is there, quite near the Peace Arch, that they built "Staffholt," the Icelandic home for aged people, in honor of their parents. Meanwhile, Stoneson building operations have spread out from Alaska to San Francisco; and the whole family, including two surviving sisters, settled in the Golden Gate city in 1920.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS LATER, post-war San Francisco found herself developing a most unattractive, middle-age spread of cracker-box building in the outlying areas. All those service personnel to whom the expression "no place like home" meant San Francisco, beat a path for the familiar scene as soon as they could without being charged with desertion, only to find that practically everyone who had been posted there hadn't the slightest intention of ever going anywhere else again. (San Francisco affects people that way. Probably Mr. Khrushchev has picked out a nice view location—just in case.)

With every existing dwelling-place bulging at the seams, the time was ripe for a revolutionary new development in housing to solve the problems of a lot of people at one time.

The Stoneson brothers conceived the idea of the residential and shopping combination city within a city, which is probably the outstanding building achievement in the city since it was rebuilt after the fire of 1906.

Utilizing 67 acres of a former golf course adjacent to Lake Merced and overlooking the open Pacific, the Stonestown tower garden apartment buildings (the latter for people with children) were built, among pleasant lawns, trees and shrubbery. Attractive, curving drives—with such names as Churchill and Buckingham Way—follow the natural contour of the land. The residential part of the development, which makes city living so enjoyable for close to 2,500 families, was completed just over 10 years ago.

THREE YEARS LATER, the architecturally co-ordinated shopping area was finished. In an era when shopping is too often an exercise in frustration for the motorist and an exhaustion for the pedestrian, Stonestown ring a complete change on the usual pattern. Free, accessible parking is provided for more than 15,000 cars a day.

But cars don't have it all their own way. The heart of the shopping district is the two-block-long mall, where everything is planned for the convenience and pleasure of the walking customer. Trees and planter boxes centre the entire length, and the flanking shop windows give the impression of one long window display. Here is a place for people to walk, stroll, or to sit if they care to—in an atmosphere of spacious leisure.

From the food market, the Stonestown resident may wheel her groceries all the way to her kitchen cupboards if she wishes. Shopping buggies are picked up each morning at the service entrance of each residential building.

A headache to shopping centre planners is the matter of deliveries. In Stonestown this has been solved by a system of underground tunnels, from which merchandise is moved to the store levels

Suburban Sprawl

by elevator. No trucks are ever seen above ground. Some 75 of the 185 business enterprises are retail establishments. Other services available include 100 doctors and dentists in the medical-dental building, banking, stock brokers, a branch of the public library, a post office and a fire station. Practically all of people's everyday needs, and many of the things they need only occasionally, are time-savily located for easy access.

WE AREN'T in Victoria, of course, a city with population problem, to compare with those of San Francisco. But we are growing fast. Some say too fast. And suburban sprawl is sneaking up on us. Already we have some hide-out fringe areas. And we have some older areas whose housing is not of the calibre meant to survive the centuries.

Tearing down and rebuilding is going on, sometimes piecemeal, sometimes in larger developments. But in total, much money is being spent on speculative contracting. Why could not more of it be co-ordinated, so that whole areas might be improved? It is fine to build shopping centres so that the housewife doesn't have to add to the downtown chaos on every time she wants a head of lettuce or a spool of thread. But too often these centres merely aggravate the problem of ugliness by starting mushrooming development of hideously ill-planned twellings.

How much better if modernization of an out-moded and rundown area could include some plan for pleasant multiple dwelling buildings with gardens surroundings, so that people could get greater enjoyment of the undeniable charm that much of Victoria possesses. With little industry of a dirt-producing nature, we have a city from which escape need not be the major objective.

We have districts—within strolling distance of the theatres the waterfront, Beacon Hill Park, the public library and churches of every denomination—upon which builders have their eyes (if not their options) for new construction projects. What a wonderful thing it would be for Victoria if a co-ordinated effort could make this new building, when it happens, a source of pride to the whole area.

By all means let's get on with burying our utility wires, disposing of bill-boards, building our downtown mall. And since we're in a fringe area and most of us like to exercise our rather exceptional choice of TV channels, why doesn't some smart electronics engineer get busy and design an alternative, or at least a camouflage, for the many-armed monster on the roof?

OUR BIGGEST selling point as a city to visit or to settle in is our beauty; but like any beauty, we need to keep a sharp eye on the mirror to make sure our slip isn't showing, our seams are straight, our hair in order, and that we have no smudges on our face.

It's too late to call the Stoneson brothers back to give their native city the needed boost of planned housing development: Ellis died about the time of the completion of Stonestown and Henry followed last year. But surely we have resident British Columbians with the happy combination of capital and imagination to do some big, bold thinking about Victoria's look to the future—and to carry it out.

Besides being a public service, it would be good business. I'd buy stock in it myself.

The Ancients had the Right Idea

EVERYONE KNOWS that mushrooms were originally meant to serve as umbrellas for pixies and seats for tired elves;

Mushrooms date back to antiquity. Ovid wrote of them. Julius Caesar passed a law limiting their sale . . . this to insure plenty of his favorite food for the tables at which he and his friends ate. The Pharaohs of Egypt monopolized them for their own use, claiming they were much too delicate for the crass appetites of the common people. The ancient Greeks thought they imparted strength and so fed them to their soldiers before sending them into battle. The ancients regarded mushrooms as almost a divine food . . . a magic food that appeared mysteriously overnight . . . a belief that is still widely accepted today, though not in the same sense.

The history of mushroom cultivation is almost as vague as that of the plant itself. Up until the 17th century only the wild kinds growing in meadows and pastures were known. It was during the reign of Louis XIV of France that mushroom breeding progressed. Parisian market gardeners experimented with their culture in caves and quarries underneath the streets of Paris. Eventually the new art leaped the channel to England, where it was carried on in darkened greenhouses.

It was not until about 50 years ago that the cultivation of these fragile growths was begun on this continent. Today mushroom farming in the United States and Canada has been consolidated and is controlled by comparatively few families, who grow millions of pounds a year. No longer is the mushroom eaten only by the VIP's of the land. Yesterday's magical morsel has become today's staple. Because of mass production and science we are eating more and better mushrooms than the Pharaohs ever dreamed of. Of course edible mushrooms still grow in fields but unless one is a seasoned expert it is better to avoid them.

DISTINCTIVE yet subtle in flavor, mushrooms turn a nondescript dish into epicure food. They are versatile as a safety pin, giving an aura of elegance to steak, gravies, soups, omelets and casseroles. There is hardly a savory that can not be enhanced by this succulent fungus.

Mushrooms are not only a garnish or a flavor to be added to other food, they can be the main dish of a meal. Our feature dish today is "Mushrooms in Toast Boats." We will serve them with rolled slices of cooked ham and broiled slices of tomato.

To make the toast boats cut "unsliced" bread in two-inch slices, remove the crusts, hollow out the bread, leaving a half-inch wall at sides and bottom. Brush all over with melted butter and toast on a cookie sheet to a golden crunchiness. Fill with sauteed mushrooms.

FILLING Melt enough butter (or margarine) in a skillet to surround each mushroom slice comfortably. Let the butter bubble up around the slices. Sprinkle with salt and freshly ground pepper. Heat, slowly, enough cream for the amount of mushrooms you are cooking (not too much, they shouldn't swim in it). To heat cream place in a cup and stand the cup in a pan of hot water. Add the heated cream to the mushrooms in the skillet and stir lightly. Remove from the heat just before the mixture boils. By the way mushrooms will become tough if overcooked.

Now there is a secret to give this dish a little extra fillip . . . just as the mushroom mixture threatens to boil (don't allow that) take a bottle of tarragon vinegar and zip in just a dash. Stir and pour immediately into the waiting toast boats. Have the tomatoes grilled ready for the plate, also the rolled cooked ham. Serve with a flourish and stand by for compliments.

NOW FOR SOMETHING really special I recommend my Surprise Meat Loaf . . . This recipe

THOUGHT FOR FOOD

By Muriel Wilson

was published in this column several years ago. At the time it caused quite a flurry among people who like to serve something different so I am going to repeat it. Maybe you missed it before.

This is a meat loaf encasing a savory stuffing . . . First mix two pounds of ground chuck steak with half a cup of undiluted evaporated milk; one teaspoon each of salt and accent and two well beaten eggs. Line a loaf pan with the meat mixture, leaving out enough meat for the topping. For the stuffing you will need two small baskets (or half a pound) of mushrooms, one medium onion chopped fine, one-half cup chopped celery hearts, two tablespoons melted butter or margarine, one-half cup milk, half a teaspoon salt and one-and-a-half cups fine soft breadcrumbs. Sauté the chopped mushrooms, onion and celery until the vegetables are limp. Add the milk and simmer just a minute. Add the seasonings and crumbs. Mix well and fill the centre of the loaf. Pat the remaining meat mixture on top. Bake in hot oven (450°) for 20 minutes, then reduce the heat to 350° and bake about 40 minutes longer. The mushroom filling hidden within the loaf is a nice surprise. Complete this menu with parsley buttered potatoes, green beans with toasted slivered almonds, rolls or garlic French bread.

BAKED STUFFED mushrooms make a fine main dish for a lunch or supper. You will need 16 large fresh mushrooms. Stores that sell mushrooms in bulk will pick out big ones for you. Cut out the stems and chop fine. Melt two tablespoons butter in a skillet. Add the chopped stems, two tablespoons each of chopped onion and parsley. Cook lightly. Remove from heat and add chopped chicken, turkey, ham or veal, two tablespoons of sherry, a dash of tabasco, half a teaspoon each of salt, celery seed, a little freshly ground black pepper and four tablespoons soft breadcrumbs. Blend well. Fill the mushroom caps, dot the tops with butter and sprinkle with fine breadcrumbs.

Your imagination is the only limit to the variations for stuffing these large mushroom caps. Crab or shrimp instead of the chicken or meat is lovely. With sea food I like to add a little chili sauce or catsup to the stuffing. Bake them in a buttered baking dish for about 20 minutes at 400°. After 10 minutes of baking brush the sides of the mushrooms with melted butter. I use a pastry brush for this. Serves four. These are nice served on a platter surrounded with hot buttered noodles. Garnish with parsley or water.

Casseroles are always a popular family dish and here is one using canned mushrooms and elbow macaroni which would make a good Lenten meal. First cook a six-ounce package of elbow macaroni in rapidly boiling salted water until tender (about eight minutes). I always add a dab of butter to the water . . . It seems to keep the macaroni from sticking together. Meanwhile melt one-quarter cup butter or margarine in a skillet. Add and lightly brown two tablespoons each of chopped onions and green pepper. Add, and simmer about four minutes, one six-ounce tin sliced mushrooms together with the liquid, one cup chicken broth, one-quarter teaspoon salt, a pinch of curry powder and a quarter cup grated Cheddar cheese plus two tablespoons of flour to thicken. Spread the drained, cooked macaroni in the bottom of a buttered two-quart casserole. Pour the mushroom mixture evenly over the top. On top of this sprinkle a mixture of one-quarter cup fine bread crumbs, two tablespoons grated Cheddar cheese and one small tin drained button mushrooms. Bake about 30 minutes or until all is bubbly and the top brown. You need a hot oven . . . 400°. Will serve six.

Mushroom Still Magic

EGGS AND MUSHROOMS go hand in glove together. Curried eggs and mushrooms are very good. If your family is not fond of curry use some chopped parsley and a dash of tarragon instead. Put a tablespoon of butter or margarine in a hot skillet and sauté one small basket fresh mushrooms. Meanwhile mix one tin cream of mushroom or cream of celery soup with two sliced hard cooked eggs (mix gently so egg slices are not broken) one-half teaspoon curry powder or a tablespoon minced parsley. Pour over the mushrooms. Add two tablespoons toasted slivered almonds. Stir gently until blended. Pour over toasted and buttered English muffin halves or toast points. Make two servings.

Mushrooms add a touch of luxury to many dishes, to gravies, soups, sandwiches, salads and stuffings. They are a delightful accessory to add distinction to steaks and roasts. If used as a substitute for meat you couldn't call them expensive.

Raw mushrooms have an interesting, firm texture and pleasant flavor, and when stuffed are a fine addition to the relish tray. Season plain cream cheese with Worcestershire sauce and a little chopped green onion or chives and fill mushroom caps. Try raw mushrooms sliced to spark up a salad.

One of the nicest mushroom sauces I know is made from a recipe taken from an interesting little book called Mediterranean Food. Just a simple little sauce but so good. It calls for half a pound of fresh mushrooms, two rashers of bacon, garlic, parsley, olive oil and a glass of wine (red or white). Slice the mushrooms and sauté in olive oil. I use butter. Add a few slivers of garlic, the bacon cut into squares and let cook for a few minutes. Add the wine, then cook fiercely for just a minute to reduce the wine. Turn the heat low and simmer for five minutes. Add a little chopped parsley last. This is good with steak, with scrambled eggs or omelet, added to casseroles or spread on bread and rolled up for toasted sandwiches.

I have used the word sauté in several places and for the benefit of inexperienced cooks I should say that this simply means to cook in a small amount of fat.

In order to enjoy the full benefit of the delightful delicate flavor of mushrooms wash them as little as possible when preparing. It is not necessary to peel them but do cut off the dry end of the stem. The stems are good to eat, so don't discard them. If you only wish to use the caps (as for stuffing) use the stems for soup or sauce.

From the time they are picked mushrooms gradually lose weight by evaporation, they contain 75% water. To help cut down evaporation, store in a plastic bag and don't try to keep them too long.

Jolly Friars Epic Journey

By HARRISON SMITH

HILDA F. M. PRESCOTT, English historian, novelist and biographer, has dedicated her life to writing, scholarship and teaching. Her field is the Middle Ages, and her massive novel, "The Man on a Donkey," was hailed four years ago as the finest historical novel of that complex period.

Miss Prescott's gift for blending scholarship with literary imagination was again revealed in her "Jerusalem Journey," and its successor, "Once to Sinai," has the same fascination and charm for the lay reader. Both books are drawn from the journals of a 15th century Swiss monk, Friar Felix Fabri, a man with a passion for travel in the almost unknown lands of the Middle East.

Once to Sinai tells of the worldly Dominican's perilous and often humorous adventures on his homeward journey from Jerusalem. From the good Friar's medieval text Miss Prescott has produced a memorable picture of the Mamluk empire at the height of its power and, incidentally, its savagry, hatred, and fear of the Christian world.

In the summer of 1483 but a dozen or so pilgrims remained in Jerusalem. Only rich men and priests were able to pay for the dangerous journey to Mt. Sinai, with its hardships and hazards, compared with which, Miss Prescott writes, the journey to Jerusalem was "no more than a holiday."

Pilgrims to Sinai had to cross a vast desert to reach the Mount. From there they climbed through mountain passes to descend to the Red Sea, riding on camels and donkeys along its hot shores to reach Cairo. From the heart of the vast Egyptian empire the weary pilgrims sailed down the Nile to Alexandria and, with many adventures, finally boarded one of the ships of the Venetian spice fleet, laden with rich cargoes from the Far East. They were not aware that in less than a half-century the discovery of a route down the coast of Africa would put an end to Egypt's claim to control the doorway to the East.

Twenty pilgrims left the Church of the Holy Sepulchre with huge piles of luggage and thought that they were lucky to escape from the lands of the Saracens. The loading of the camels and donkeys was an entertaining farce. Felix Fabri, however, was clever enough to hire as his mount a big white donkey, an ugly beast. From that moment they were besieged by lusty beggars and thieves, and taxed in every desert town and Egyptian city.

The good Friar's sense of humor enlivens the story, though the constant atmosphere of uncertainty and danger of being robbed or murdered might have tried the most tranquil of monks.

"Once to Sinai" not only opens a door to a world now lost to memory, it is a rewarding book, and the reader may breathe a sigh of relief when this stalwart and delightful monk arrives in Venice, climbs over the Alps, and rides in safety to his peaceful monastery in Ulm.

NEW FICTION

OUT of AFRICA

FRIDAY'S FOOTPRINT is Nadine Gordimer's third volume of stories, and, though not the equal of the other two, it nonetheless reinforces her primacy as South Africa's foremost practitioner in this fiction form. The book contains a baker's dozen of tales—one of them a novella—set in various parts of Africa and all marked by the consistently high level of craftsmanship we have come to expect of this writer. At that I might add that even when Miss Gordimer is not in top form, she is still better than most.

At her best her writing appears so effortless and her construction so imperceptible that you tend to be unaware of them till she pulls you up short with a needle-sharp image or phrase. In Friday's Footprint, a subtly-titled tale, she follows her favorite method of unhurriedly building up a character or situation before resolving it with a single revealing flash. Here the meaning of a woman's second marriage to a man younger than herself crystallizes in a swift moment of truth. In "A Style of Her Own," another though less penetrating study of a woman's unsuccessful marriage, there is the same skillful portraiture climaxed by the act of revelation.

Miss Gordimer's finest characters are usually women, whom she observes not so much with sympathy as with understanding. The blowsy Bovary who couldn't stand domesticity with her roly-poly husband, the wife who regularly appears as a whirlwind of trouble in front of her neighbors—these are characters whose innermost feelings are set before us with economy and finality. We may not like these women, but they stand before us, nakedly revealed.

With men, the situation is different. Miss Gordimer's outward observations are as acute as ever, but motivation is not as inevitable. This is why the novella, "An Image of Success," doesn't come off. It turns on the decline and fall of a wealthy businessman who becomes enamored of a girl half his age, marries her, and then sinks slowly into indigence and degradation.

None of the stories in the book is concerned directly with South Africa's race problems, which may explain its general lack of urgency and passion. But then the artist must take her material where she finds it. The descriptive touches are unerringly right—the Afrikaner Cabinet Ministers with "their stern public faces, their apocalyptic manner, and the urbanity that coats politicians invisibly as the oil on a duck's back"; or their schoolboy sons—"at 14 or 15 they weighed 170 lbs., and had the terrifying belly laugh that comes with newly broken voices and new beards breaking erratically through adolescent pimples."

Here is an unhappy land and its people, wrestling this time not with their collective guilt, but with the problems of their private worlds.—WPS.

Books— and Authors

Year of the Waughs

ALEC RETURNS TO TROPICS

IT WOULD APPEAR 1960 is to be the year of the Waughs, in which the brothers Alec and Evelyn, as is their wont, are due to divide up the world into cricket and Catholic books, respectively.

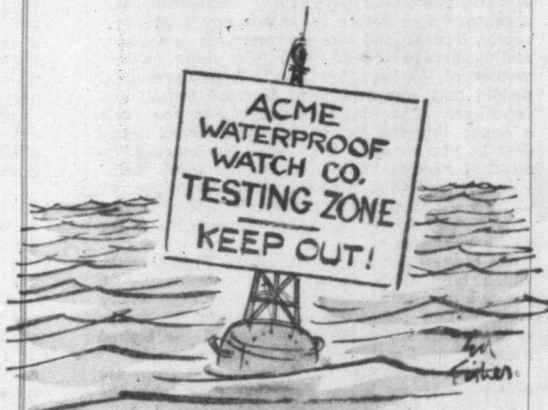

Evelyn's came out in February—a biography of the Catholic man of letters, Monsignor Ronald Knox. Alec's new novel is Fuel for the Flame, which, though not a novel about cricket per se, is set on an Oriental island where cricket is played. In fact, as early as page eight we meet a character who is also a cricketer. The proprieties of the Waughs are thus observed.

Inevitably, Fuel for the Flame will be compared with its predecessor, Island in the Sun. Like that book, it is a story of passion and intrigue on an island in sunshine. This time the island is an imaginary one on the equator, southwest of Borneo in the East Indies. For background purposes the author has introduced two elements of contemporary history, either of which means trouble in the Far East in this day and age. First, the island has oil, which makes the British eager to perpetuate their suzerainty. Second, it also has a vigorous nationalist movement, which is less than eager to keep the island British-oriented. Sitting on this potential tinder-box is an amiable king who likes his British advisers.

Unfortunately, the king is not well. His son and heir, Prince Rhya, is a British-educated playboy who proves his prowess as a lady's man in the opening chapter. Here, then, we have the ingredients of a colorful, action tale which touches politics as well as love, oil diplomacy as well as exotic adventure.

To concoct a palatable dish from so elaborate a recipe requires an experienced storyteller, and this is precisely what Mr. Waugh proves himself to be. It would be futile to try to outline here the counter-plot. Are communists infiltrating the oilfields? Will Prince Rhya marry the beautiful Annetta Marsh? Before we learn the answers Mr. Waugh has taken us to many parties, to as many boudoirs—what else is there to do on a small island but work, drink and make love?—and has initiated us into the backstage intrigues of oil diplomacy. The writing is crisp and unsentimental, the tropical backdrops expertly painted, and the pace unflaggingly swift. Mr. Waugh is surprisingly well informed on the details of oil production and police administration.

Fuel for the Flame plumbs no depths, proclaims no messages. It is just a rattling good yarn tied to Far Eastern tensions, adroitly constructed and tightly told, and as up-to-date as today's newspaper. It has the magic words "best seller" written all over it.

In Harry Davy's Hands It was a Working Tool . . .

FAMED RED 'BUG' TOLD ST

IT WILL BE 44 years ago, next Sunday, that a teen-ager called Frank Putland joined the Royal Navy, to get his initial training as a wireless operator at HMS Ganges, the shore establishment at Shotley, in Suffolk, a couple of miles from Harwich.

Maybe as young Frank doubled around the parade ground, between classroom exercises, he occasionally passed under the unblinking gaze of a dark-skinned, turbaned East Indian potentate who gave no hint that he'd once been to Esquimalt; a spot where, 14 years later, Frank Putland's navy career would end. The dusky sentinel was the upthrust figurehead of the old-time, first-rate HMS Ganges, a marine memento of interest to Sash Spring Islanders.

After Shotley, trained telegraphist Putland was in and out of a variety of ships, large and small. Once, in 1919, he found himself in the destroyer-Sikh in the Caspian Sea where he occasionally copied press from Moscow to keep his commander up to date on Tass news. The Sikh at that time was engaged in intelligence work in connection with the Baku oil fields.

Later Frank put in a stint with the West Indies squadron, then on to the Yangtze River, in the Wild Swan, before deviating to Esquimalt as an instructor.

From there, in 1930, Frank stepped into the ranks of the B.C. Provincial Police and as a policeman-telegrapher was up and down the coast, afloat and ashore, until finally he found himself "pounding brass," as the saying goes, at corps headquarters in Victoria.

Absorbed into the RCM Police in 1950, seven years later, Frank finally retired. Even in retirement, however, he still pounds a key in his well-fitted out radio "shack" at 4066 Grange Road.

Amateur operators "hams"—from Auckland to Addis Ababa, from Council Bluffs to Coronation Gulf, know and admire the swinging style of Frank Putland's "fist." It should be an experienced touch after 14 years in the navy and 27 years of rapid-fire police radio transmission, which included fire, flood and catastrophe interspersed with cryptic code messages that sometimes held the key to big doings in the criminal world.

It was men like Frank Putland who, long ago, pioneered the first international radio link between B.C. and points south of the border. Today this sort of thing falls more and more to the lot of teletype and microwave speech, with the emphasis on automation.

I'VE KNOWN FRANK PUTLAND for 30 years and chatting with him the other morning out at his Grange Road home, he suddenly swivelled in his chair to pick something from his desk.

"Remember this?" he said, as he held it up. I remembered it. It was a key, but a key with a history.

Now a key, for the benefit of the uninitiated, whether it's used on land or sea, is a spring loaded "thing" with a plastic knob you pump up and down to make dots and dashes. Better than half a century ago, before there was any radio-telegraphy, busiest land line operators—in newspaper and brokerage offices—took to a more modern version of the key: the "bug." It had a vertical paddle that was alternated between thumb and forefinger. Thumbed to the right and you made a dash; fingered to the left it made as many dots as you needed. This way, for instance, instead of making 13 motions for the word "fish," you only made six. Operators cut this further by using a weird mish-mash of symbols like "tt" for "that," "gg" for going, "px" for press, "wx" for weather, and so on.

In brokers' offices they used the Phillips code, which built their speed to an unbelievable 90 words a minute and in press work an even wilder condensation permitted such swiftness as "potus cats," which stood for "President of the United States created a tremendous sensation".

It was this sort of stuff, transposed from the glitter clatter of a sounder, that flew from the operator's fingers as he bashed his "mill" (typewriter), chewed tobacco, and still had an ear cocked for the washroom story going on at the next desk!

The key that Frank Putland uses, its heavy steel base painted a fire engine red, is not only a "bug," but also an heirloom. Back of it is the 100-year-story of local news gathering, a story that goes back before the days when any telegraph linked the Island to the mainland. Then the "British Colonist," as it was known, posted a boy on the rocks across the harbor to keep a lookout for the sails of an incoming ship. On his cue, a Colonist man pulled into a canoe, whose Indian paddlers whipped the water to a froth to get him aboard and grab the latest San Francisco newspapers. From these were culled excerpts of U.S. and foreign news.

Later, when the railway got as far north as Portland, the San Francisco papers came by horse-drawn stage to Olympia, then by steamer to the Island. In the period between 1862 and 1866, when Victoria's 4,500 population had the two four-page morning papers—the Chronicle and the Colonist—rivalry was so keen that the Colonist employed a pony express rider from Portland to Monticello, Wash., to beat the stage.

Often it was in roundabout fashion that the news hit the front page. In '66 when the colonial government subsidized the Hudson's Bay ship Labouchere to handle freight, mail and passengers between here and San Francisco, there was great interest in the new service.

BY THIS TIME the telegraph line was as far as Seattle and on April 13 word came from the Sound city that the Labouchere, refitted at the Golden Gate, was ready to inaugurate the service.

Three days later, around two in the morning, gravel thrown against the Chronicle editor's window discovered restaurant man Levy outside, hoarsely calling, "There's a wire in Seattle saying the Labouchere has been wrecked."

Down in a flash came the editor and by dint of prowling city hotels eventually found a newcomer from Seattle who'd actually seen the wire. It was such a scoop that the Chronicle's doors were locked until the papers were off the press!

Both papers at that time had a staff of two men each, but they had the zeal of 40! The Colonist eventually bought out the Chronicle, which is the time it changed its name from British Colonist to Daily Colonist. In time came marine cables and telegraph offices opened downtown. Which brings us to the turn of the century and one Harry Davy.

This was the time when the CPR telegraph office was on the corner of Trounce Alley and Government Street, and historians who may wish to explore around behind W. & J. Wilson's collar counter may still see faint traces in the floor where the leads used to come through. Next door to E. A. Morris, the tobacconist, was the Western Union, the opposition, whose leads, too, once connected up to Jack O'Brien's chattering sounder as 50 years ago he would walk to and fro on a high trestle scribbling on a blackboard the play-by-play account of the World Series, while a spellbound crowd overflowed from his cigar store out on to the sidewalk.

WHEN HARRY DAVY was night operator at the CPR, Bill Christie was the manager. Over at the Western Union, Frank Bowness rattled the key, and Bill Dee was manager.

Harry, who'd been operating for about 10 years, proved from the start that he was a co-operative soul. An old-timer once told me how he used to perambulate up and down Trounce Alley while behind his window Harry scribbled the blow-by-blow account of a championship prize-fight. When it was evident the favorite was taking a beating, Harry would significantly flutter his fingers in a prearranged code and his friend outside, catching the meaning, would pop into the Grotto saloon across the way and make some astonishing predictions.

Once when a group of U.S. reporters gathered in Victoria to greet the first boatload of miners from the new Klondike strike, Harry, on his day off, accompanied one of them in a hired tug to board the vessel off Race Rocks. The story obtained, Harry directed they head for Sooke. Most of the other chartered tugs were faster and heading for Port Townsend and the Western Union. It didn't worry Davy, because he'd arranged with a pal at Port Townsend to keep sending page after page of the Bible—at press rates—until Harry had a chance to hook on to the government line at Sooke and get his friend's story down the coast.

Combining a keen news sense with his operating ability, many an advance tip on world news came to the Colonist news room, thanks to Harry Davy. It was, of course, the era of the personal touch, and Harry had operator friends in the most unexpected places all around the continent. Mostly they were men he had helped at one time or another; men who, in a pinch, remembered Harry Davy.

ALL OF WHICH brings us up to the early-morning hours of Feb. 27, 1900, with the British Empire involved in the South African War. Ten days before, the battle of Paardeberg had coincided with Buller's crossing of the Tugela River. Unsuspected, however, on this Feb. 27 was the fact that the Boer General Cronje had surrendered and the town of Ladysmith had been relieved.

Veteran newsman Charlie Gibbons was city editor of the Colonist at the time, and late that evening as he was having a drink in the Grotto with Frank Bowness, he heard the latter mention that Seattle had inquired if Victoria had anything on Cronje. Some operator in Seattle had handled a code message in which the only plain word was "Cronje." If you're bothering about the secrecy of messages . . . don't. This, as I have said, was the era of the personal touch in news gathering.

Gibbons, a far-away look in his eye, finished his drink and casually took his leave. Across the alley he noted the CPR telegraph office in darkness, shut for the night. He knew, by the hour, that Harry Davy hadn't been gone long and he knew Harry lived on Topaz Avenue. It was the work of a minute to hail a night prowling hack and following Davy's homeward track they caught up with him, pedalling slowly homeward on his bicycle, out near the rice mill on Douglas Street.

A quick consultation, and Harry returned to open his office. With the wire open, first he queried Vancouver. They had nothing fresh on

Mr. Murray owed Morris a little debt of gratitude.
Murray, it turned out, was getting code news of events in Africa but keeping them secret for market reasons. In a matter of minutes, Morris relayed to Davy the confidential tip that Cronje had surrendered to British forces. It was just 20 minutes to two in the morning at Victoria when Davy turned to Gibbons with an excited,

"Fifteen hundred words coming up."

Out the door and up Trounce Alley raced Gibbons, to burst into the Colonist's Broad Street

Next he phoned Mayor Hayward, which is how, just before daylight, sleepy Victoria householders awoke to the glad clash of church bells.

It was just about 7 a.m., Victoria time, as Colonist carriers were going their rounds, that over in London at 3 p.m. a War Office official was reading a bulletin to a throng of excited newsmen.
Little did they know that, thanks to Harry Davy's continent-wide circle of brass pounders, Victoria's Daily Colonist had already scooped the world on Cronje's surrender!

Extra satisfaction to Charlie Gibbons was the knowledge that bundles of the Colonist were aboard that morning's Islander bound for Vancouver.

For a time, around 1906, Harry Davy became a sea-going wireless operator, running a spark set on the CGS Quadra. Once, when Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, travelled in the ship to Alaska and the Portland Canal, he filed a message with Harry asking James Dunsmuir to meet him at Ladysmith. Spark transmitters didn't kick very far in those days, so Harry relayed the message through an American ship, the City of Ohio. Later the Ohio was wrecked and the only casualty was the wireless operator. Earl Grey, struck by the tragedy that befell the man who had handled his message, was one of those who spurred the idea of a memorial for operators who gave their lives on duty.

Eventually Harry Davy was back on shore again, and in 1911 joined the Colonist staff as a telegrapher, still with his familiar "bug", which had been to sea and back again.

Came, in time, the formation of Canada's coast-to-coast news-gathering service, the Canadian Press, and Harry Davy became its Victoria operator, still working in the Colonist office on Broad Street.

It was during that time that Harry got a thrill out of paying a visit back to Napanee, there to meet again 80-year-old Lester Boyes, who had taught Harry teleggraphy when he was a kid. They hadn't seen each other for 50 years.

Finally, in 1930, ill health forced Harry's retirement after 45 years of key pounding. It was around that time that he was beginning to hear from his old friend and local CP representative,

FRANK PUTLAND and his famed "bug."

Cornelius Moriarity, of the B.C. Police and their province-wide network of radio stations; a network that funnelled the daily crime record into the old Police Barracks on Menzies Street.

PERHAPS IT WAS in admiration of a new operating tradition the police were helping to build that Harry Davy was prompted one day to turn over to "Mory" Moriarity his beloved key, his red "bug". He wanted Frank Putland to have it.

Moriarity duly made the presentation and the old red bug was a feature of the Provincial Police headquarters radio room for the next 20 years.
On a day in early January, 1949, George Henry "Harry" Davy, in his eightieth year, "signed off" for the last time. Next year came the amalgamation of the Provincial Police with the RCM Police, and for seven more years the old-fashioned red "side swiper" handled police traffic.

When Frank Putland retired in 1957 he alone, perhaps held a memory of the tradition behind the old key and the men who had used it. He took it with him into civil life, out to Grange Road and his radio shack. There it continues to speak to a world-wide collection of telegraphists. Perhaps one day, who knows, it may end up in a little glass case on a pedestal in the Colonist office, a reminder of Harry Davy, that very helpful brass pounder who gave the Colonist its scoop of the century!

THIS WEEK'S ANAGRAM

How is your vocabulary? There is no better or more fascinating way to improve it than by solving these anagrams each week. Add the letters in the first column to the letters in the second column, and rearrange the letters so as to form a new word. Example: FEND plus SEE equals FEED.
Answer: DEFENSE. Can you solve the following anagrams?

Catherine Oyen Might as Well Change Her Name

She's Known As 'Tosca'

By BERT BINNY

TOSCA is not her real name. Her real name is Catherine — Catherine Oyen. "But," says she, "Nobody knows me by that name. Everybody simple knows me as 'Tosca'."

Why?

Because she was always singing. Born and educated in Holland, she spent two years in England and it was there that she fell heir to the name 'Tosca'. It has stuck. It has left 'Catherine' without a job.

Inasmuch as the "Tosca" of Sardau and Puccini was "a famous opera singer," and our particular Tosca is quite enraptured with singing, the naming of the latter is appropriate enough.

But, after that, the similarities begin to break down. Florida Tosca was apparently dark, a brunette with dark, dark eyes. Tosca Oyen better resembles the Magdalen; Marcelline Affayanti, who was blonde with blue eyes.

So that, actually, Tosca Oyen has affinities with two characters in the same grand opera. That, to use a term which is honest in an antique shop, is something new.

Tosca Oyen is an active participant in the productions of the Duncan Musical Club.

Six years ago she came straight from her native Holland to Duncan and, when she felt that her command of the English language warranted it, she plunged into matters musical and theatrical.

Only the linguistic barrier prevented her from jumping off the train at Duncan and straight into the local entertainment field. Tosca was fully prepared in every other way.

For a succession of summers in Holland she had attended a six-week course on the theatre, learning acting, design, lighting, makeup and all the other departments. In fact, she carried off awards for her proficiency very frequently. She had very excellent professional training indeed and profited thereby.

Then, since she was 18, Tosca was on the stage. She appeared in two different plays every year and these went on four. Among them were such as "Pride and Prejudice" and "You Can't Take It With You."

So, with lots of good training and wide experience behind her, Tosca was a natural for the theatrical activities in Duncan or anywhere else—just as soon as she became fluent with the English language. And this she now certainly is.

In 1959 she made her first appearance in the Duncan Musical Club's production of the well known "No, No, Nanette," when she played the Maid. This year, just at the end of last month, she was "Louella" in the musical comedy, "Roberta." "Louella," by the way, is a fashion model in Paris and, referred to on the program as "the" model, Tosca wore some particularly devastating creations. She glowed like a firefly when she showed me a dress she was going to wear and which, especially with blonde Tosca inside it, would do more damage at 100 yards than Annie Oakley at her deadliest.

Tosca Oyen prefers comedy parts but, whatever role she has to play, she gives it everything.

On one occasion she went on with a temperature of 103 degrees, aching all over and half smothered by the smell of greasepaint.

Nor does she let up for a moment while the play is in progress.

- (5) MEASLES

"Well, here goes the three-minute mile."

"If," says she, "you have to affect a lisp or an accent or if you have to adopt some particular gait or posture, you should keep it up backstage as well as onstage."

She believes in "concentration to the point of absorption" which seems to be the mental corollary of maintaining physical peculiarities offstage.

However, this "point of absorption" is, apparently, rather special or hard to define because the next tenet in Tosca's theatrical credo is that "you should listen to the others on the stage with you so as to take care of cues, movements and so on."

This would be difficult to do if the "point of absorption" was what it first sounds like: that is, complete.

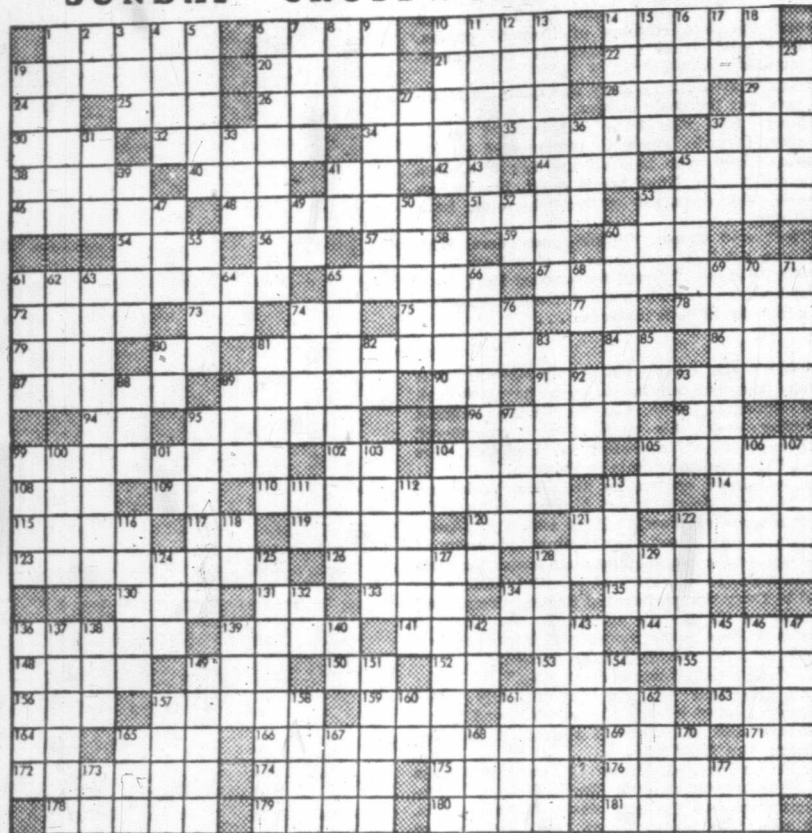

Tosca also advocates a clear voice and the capacity for projection on the stage. There can be no quarrel with that.

Tosca Oyen and her husband keep the Reptile Zoo near Duncan. This, she observes, is attractive because it enables her to meet people—not reptiles only.

But, on the other hand, she herself is very pleasant to meet. And she has a lot to offer—quite unsparingly—to the entertainment world.

Greer Garson Explains

HOW to KEEP a HAPPY HOME

HOLLYWOOD—Though Greer Garson lives in Bel-Air, there is an air of an English country house about her home with the expansive rooms and the large open fireplaces. It's natural. She's English.

Greer greeted me in gay-colored velvet hostess pyjamas that she said had come from a native craft shop in Santa Fe.

"I live in jeans or slacks when I'm at the ranch," she confided, as she seated herself behind a beautifully-set tea tray. "But because I'm wearing trousers, it does not mean that I want to be without femininity."

She mentioned the beatniks and how there was nothing new about their unconventional dress.

"It goes back to 19th century Bohemianism. But it is possible to be intellectual and talented and well dressed," Greer said.

She handed me a delicate china teacup and English raisin bread.

"It is surprising to me how some of these young actresses come to rehearsals so carelessly dressed. Being neat doesn't depend on money. I actually was better dressed as a struggling young actress than I am now because then I couldn't afford to make a mistake. You don't have to buy a lot of clothes to be fashionable. But you must learn about fit—the importance of having the waistline in the right place—to have a fabric that will hold its shape so that it will come back from the cleaners looking like new.

"Never indulge in anything but a basic style so your clothes won't go out of fashion. There is so much conformity today, I rather like stressing my individuality as much as possible," she added.

"You were talking about femininity," I reminded her.

"Considerable comment has been made about the American woman's lack of it," she pointed out. "It is true that the women from Latin countries seem more serene, but they live in a society that does not tolerate divorce and so they are trained to make marriage a career.

"I have great admiration for the abilities of American women. Running a home is only one of many things they do well. But they must never lose the realization that the atmosphere in the home depends on them. There is nothing that will hold a marriage together like creating an air of perfumed tenderness. This is more important than being a good cook.

"They used to say the way to a man's heart was through his stomach, but psychological surveys today report that the first requisite is a harmonious environment. Even if you work and arrive home shortly before he does, be feminine, have a soft voice, an agreeable attitude and a fresh complexion. He may not comment on it but he will respond to it and come home with a sense of pleasure."

"I've known you a long time and you get prettier with the years," I told her.

SHE SMILED. "My husband tells me that. But I'm happy and I have more understanding of myself. You can't be handsome with unresolved problems. I'm grateful that I do not find it difficult to face myself. When I'm disturbed or unhappy, I seek to discover what mistake I've made. Suffering can be caused by petty little things in your nature that you are trying to conceal from yourself, just as much as by a big blow from fate.

"I was born under the sign of Libra, which means I strive for balance. It is the excesses in our lives that get us into trouble. Vitality and youthfulness depend on appreciating and caring for your body, not abusing it. There is so much information about what to eat today that is good for you. Anyone who is interested can learn about nutrition.

"My mother was way ahead of her time in the appreciation of health-food. My husband and I were vegetarians for three years and never had a doctor, but we gave it up because it complicated our social life. It was embarrassing to a hostess when we didn't eat what she placed before us.

"Solitude," Greer continued, "is essential for every thinking person—you must be alone for some part of every day to keep a balanced disposition. I have read Anne Morrow Lindbergh's 'Gift from the Sea' innumerable times. Her book is an example of quietness. It is so easy to worry and let small concerns fritter away the meaning of existence."

THE STAMP PACKET

RECENTLY in the huge 71st Infantry Regiment Armory at Park Avenue and 34th Street, New York, the National Postage Stamp Show—the world's largest annual philatelic event—began its eleventh successful year.

Dominating the show was a magnificent display in the Court of Honor, arranged by the art director, Bernard Davis, head of Philadelphia's National Philatelic Museum. In the display is the 30-frame "Million Dollar Exhibit" of postal paper, dating from 1847.

This fabulous presentation comes from the philatelic branch of the U.S. post office department. Other groups of stamps are from Postmaster-General Summerfield's "Parade of Postal Progress," most of which have never been publicly shown in New York. In addition, there were stamps from the national stamp collection of the Smithsonian Institution.

Crowds constantly surrounded flatbed printing press set up by the bureau of engraving. On this press special stamps were printed during the day—and were destroyed at night. Requests for samples were gently refused.

The U.S. post office department went all out for this show, in co-operation with the American Stamp Dealers' Association, who sponsor the annual event.

MAIL by MISSILE

A post office was set up, commemorative stamps put on sale, and the new 15-cent airmail was first placed on sale and cancelled with a special cancellation.

On display was an operating facer-cancelling machine; an automatic address reader; a model of a completely mechanized post office, now being constructed in Oakland, Calif., and models of the latest stamp and postal card vending machines.

There was also a scale model of a self-service post office; a parcel post acceptance model and a model of the "Regulus" which carried the post office department's experimental missile mail, with illustrative material concerning the project.

According to officials, before many years have passed mail by rocket will be as common as airmail today. The ASDA poster stamps for this year's show emphasize the missile age, with two designs of rockets—one with the inscription "Rocket Mail."

Showing for the first time anywhere was a sound film in color tracing the development of the St. Lawrence Seaway stamp from its inception to the first day of issue, and featuring scenes from the formal opening of the seaway. The film opens with a map of the seaway area, with a progressive highlighting of the route as it flows from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic Ocean along the St. Lawrence River.

Designs evolved by Canadian and United States artists for mutual stamps marking the historic occasion were shown, including the one finally adapted by the two nations. Steps in the engraving, approval and production of the U.S. seaway stamp are also shown.

Many other films were featured by the Swiss post office, Ghana and the United Nations. A round of lectures on various aspects of stamp collecting was being held during the entire three days of the show. Stamp societies and stamp publications were busy contacting customers, and the flood of enthusiastic collectors seeking stamps overwhelmed the hundred-odd booths of the happy dealers.

It was a grand show.

Cariboo Gold Built

THIS IS A STORY about a prospector whose perseverance brought prosperity—to himself, his family and three generations of workers in the industry he established. It is also the story of paint: paint which, manufactured in Victoria, has covered a large proportion of the homes and factories, barns and boats and buildings, inside and out, from the Pacific coast to the Great Lakes.

The paint, of course, is BAPCO's product, from the still-expanding British America Paint Company Ltd. plant at Laurel Point, and wearing the nationally-familiar label depicting "Satin-Glo Sam."

It was tragedy that brought J. Carl Pendray to the chief executive's chair at Bapco. He was 34 when a water-tower at the plant collapsed and instantly killed his father. Only four years before, his elder brother, Ernest, had been fatally injured when his horse bolted and threw him on Government Street.

Youngest of the four Pendray brothers, Roy, died in 1928, so that Carl and Herbert J., a few years his junior, carried on the business until W. Allan Pendray joined the upper echelons in 1931 as a vice-president and general manager. At the same time F. A. E. Manning became a vice-president, specializing in market analysis and sales administration.

Herbert died in 1957, and Carl is semi-retired, so it is a new generation which now represents the Pendray family—except for occasional meetings—in the handsome $5,000 office building "over the Bay."

ALTHOUGH "W. J." was father of the paint company, that wasn't his first industrial venture in Victoria. In 1875, in partnership with a clothier named W. J. Jeffree, he had hit upon the idea of utilizing the wasted fat and tallow from Victoria butcher shops in the manufacture of soap. The two bought land on Humboldt Street, right on the waterfront of James Bay, and situated at approximately the point where the Empress Hotel's "new" wing stands today.

Albion Foundry, another notable name in Victoria industry, built the plant, which, within a few years, was turning out 18,000 pounds of soap daily.

It was a smelly sort of place, but that wasn't altogether the fault of the soap processing. The tidal flats in that part of James Bay, since reclaimed for Canadian Pacific construction, were a noxious stretch, especially at low water. Nor did the odor of the waterfront prevent Pendray soaps from refreshing a large part of the nation, for the famed "White Swan" brand marched across the continent.

Then, in 1899, "W. J." branched out into paint, buying the Canada Paint Company plant, and planning expansion. It was hard going, the first few years, but the soap business carried the paint until Lever Brothers bought out the White Swan brand and the Pendray family concentrated on paint in 1913.

They'd put in new plant on Humboldt Street—close by the old soap works, and flanked by vinegar, blacking and box-factories.

In 1913, "W. J." the old prospector, now a flourishing and ambitious business man with a sound reputation already established in paint, was killed when his factory water tower crashed without warning . . .

ALLAN PENDRAY said the other day that with the continued expansion of production here and 100,000 feet added in branch warehouses at Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary and Saskatoon in the past five years, another 20,000 square feet is required in Victoria "right away."

The prospector was W. J. Pendray, whose good fortune in the Nevada and, later, the Cariboo goldfields established the not inconsiderable fortune upon which the paint business has been built.

His sons and his grandson have shown the same perseverance and business acumen that characterized the prospector-founder of the big Bapco business. J. Carl Pendray, former mayor of Victoria and one of the far-sighted planners for the city's future as a residential and tourist centre, is still president of the firm. His son, W. A. Pendray, is vice-president and general manager. So the chain of management has passed to the third generation.

The firm isn't standing still. Its retail outlets at Vancouver, New Westminster, Calgary, Edmonton, Prince Albert, Regina and Saskatoon are doing just what the founder envisaged 'way back in '99—painting the whole of the west.

In capacity the Bapco plant is the largest west of Toronto and north of San Francisco. But perhaps the most significant indication of growth is in the employment figure: there were 28 in the plant in 1904 and 175 at Laurel Point at present. The whole operation employs in the neighborhood of 400 men and women.

There have been many changes since "W. J.'s" day. The old-time bookkeeper with his high stool and his ledgers has given way to the Univac system of accounting, stock control, sales analysis, invoicing . . . all done by the electrical brain, one of only six Processes, even products, change constantly. Paint Research Associates, with its $250,000 Chicago laboratories, can do basic research for member firms — of which Bapco is one — up to the point of "formulation of basic synthesis," as Mr. Manning says. "Then we do the manufacturing here."

Technical directors of the member-manufacturers meet twice a year in Chicago for an exchange of ideas and discussion of new theories and problems. "That way we're right at the source of technical advances, assisted by expert staffs," said Angus W. McIntyre, chief chemist, who has been with the company 40 years.

There are new colors every year — and Bapco will turn out as many as 6,000 kinds and colors of paints, varnishes and lacquers — and the experts in New York are passing along the color trend for 1961 already, said general sales manager C. L. Loughane.

"For instance, there is a market for pipeline coatings, interior and exterior; the interior coating to speed flow and eliminate corrosion, the external application to replace the wrapping formerly used, expensive both to supply and apply. Our coatings can be put on economically at railhead and speed the laying of pipe."

THE FACTORY is something that has to be seen to be appreciated. It isn't the paint-spattered place that might be expected. Nor is there any more than a rather pleasant series of odors. The spray room, where color cards are made up, and the printing department, where labels, stationery, specification books, manuals and sales literature are printed, have their own distinctive smells. But in the main the once over-powering smell of mixes, varnish, lacquer, resin and alcohol has been eliminated.

It is possible to follow the process of manufacture from the mixing floor, where dry pigment is turned into paste; through the grinding mills of different types; to the thinning tanks, ranging up to 500 gallons capacity, and into the tinting space where experts match the mix with the samples.

From here the paint goes into automatic filling machines, and into the cans — the lids coded to indicate product and batch number. Labelling, too, is automatic. And, after cartoning, an electric transporter carries the cases to the warehouse.

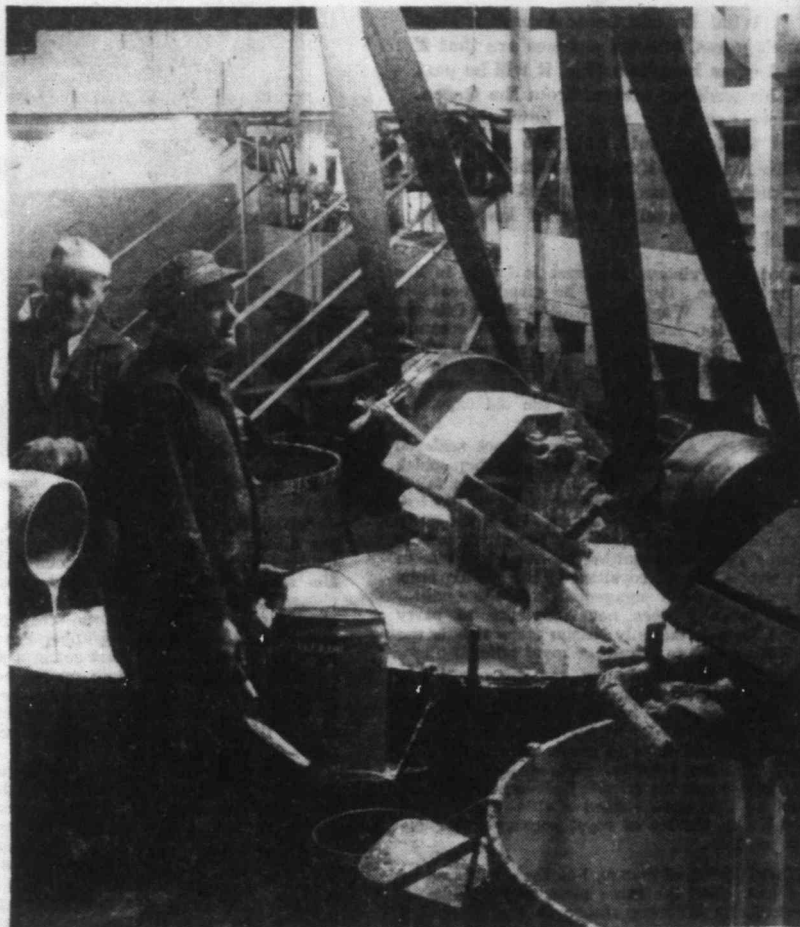

There's a second method of paint making employed, by the use of pebble mills — ten of them, the largest 750 gallons. The pebbles accomplish the same result as the grinders in another section.

Putty is made in a vast, churn-like "chaser" with a 1½ ton roller mixing the whiting and the linseed oil.

The engine room provides much of the plant's electrical requirements by steam generation, and there are machine and carpenters' shops to take care of normal needs.

From the dock, tank steamers pump solvents to the extensive 30,000 gallon tanks in the "farm" and there is an inert gas generator for the

Plain Tony Jones, Man with a Camera

By Richard L. Thomas
The Islander's London Correspondent

ALMOST OVERNIGHT Tony Jones became Antony Armstrong-Jones.

What he will become next is anyone's guess, but the chances are that if and when he gets a title, it will be part of his wedding present from the Queen. There are many people, however, who feel that it would be more in accord with the times if he remained plain Mr. Armstrong-Jones and content to shelter under the Royal dignity of his future wife's title.

After all, Princess Margaret is fourth in line for the throne. He cannot be given precedence over his wife. Why worry? And HRH Princess Margaret, Mrs. Armstrong-Jones would create a precedent quite in keeping with the time in which we live where, increasingly, titles are given for public service and distinction in various spheres of activity rather than, as in the old days, for contributions to party funds.

So far Mr. Armstrong-Jones has not achieved the kind of eminence as a photographer which would merit a title. The fact that he has fallen in love with Princess Margaret is not in itself of sufficient merit to justify a title. He is not likely to contribute to party funds even from the fabulous state of royalties he has earned from the reproduction of royalties of his photographs every day since his engagement was announced—because royalty does not contribute to party funds. In fact, the only reason for a title is the fact he is going to acquire a royal wife.

It would be much better, say some critics in Britain, if Princess Margaret became plain Mrs. Armstrong-Jones and her husband rewarded later if he earns his title by virtue of the many royal occasions he will have to grace. And if he does the job that has been thrust upon him with the grace and charm his friends believe he will, then indeed he will have earned a title—for no one believes that the lot of royal consort will come easily to him.

MARGARET, of course, has the reputation of being cast from the same mold as the Duke of Windsor. By ordinary standards she may be a little prim, by royal standards, she is thoroughly unconventional. Like Edward, when Prince of Wales, she had a period in her life when her main excitement was in attempting to outwit the security guards which Scotland Yard provides for royal personages. She delighted in getting away from the royal prison, but she had a paradoxical dignity which rarely left her. She has snubbed people who have called her Margaret instead of "Ma'am," she loathes American newspapers who call her Meg. She is irritated by the kind of film star treatment meted out in certain directions.

Broadly, Margaret has tried to be every inch a royal princess but with something of the common touch provided the touch is hers. She has the reputation of being a little bit flighty—at one time a little flirtatious—but it is really a question of degree. The flightiness of Princess Margaret would have been classified as a little upstage in less illustrious society. And behind it all is a very deep and profound religious faith which undoubtedly carried her through when her father died, and again when the whole world seemed to be against her in her romance with Group Captain Peter Townsend. Many of her friends said that it would have been broken off long before it was on purely religious grounds, but her little streak of obstinacy kept it alive just because she would had its eyes focussed upon them.

Indeed there were many wild rumors around. One of them, much more credible than many believed, was that she was anxious to take vows in an Anglican convent, which in turn was interpreted by some that she was to be the first member of the Royal Family to become a Roman Catholic since the Restoration. The simple explanation was that they did not know that there were Church of England convents. What is certain is that religion means a great deal to her, and that she is very loyal to the discipline of the church.

PRINCESS MARGARET . . . happy choice

TONY JONES, according to friends, belongs to the lighter side of Princess Margaret's life. Not unlike her, he can be very serious and very gay. His seriousness was taken out mostly in his chosen profession of photographer and he was rapidly nearing the top of the tree. Now he has given it all up. A photographer cannot have a princess for a wife—at least not in a professional capacity. At the same time, no one believes that Tony will give up photography—he will just become probably the most distinguished amateur of his time and a critical nightmare to future royal photographers.

Whilst work was his main preoccupation, there is no doubt that Tony enjoyed the lighter side of life. He had his share of parties, he was not averse to a pretty face, and everyone these days is recalling the more excessive of his experiences—from falling into a fishpond to surreptitious flirtations in dimmed lights. All of which really adds up to the fact that he was a happy young man and behaved like one. And perhaps, like many attractive and eligible bachelors, he has left behind a not inconsiderable trail of broken hearts. Much of the time he was on the inner reaches of the happy young people with whom Princess Margaret associated. It seems that Tony and Margaret were sometimes at the same night spots, but they never met until he became a royal photographer.

HE BECAME a royal photographer by stealth and a city. Instead of seeking out the right people to effect introductions or to drop the right word in the right ear, he relied upon his own background of Eton and Oxford and a letter to the Duchess of Kent seeking permission to photograph her son—also an Old Etonian—on his 21st birthday. Surprisingly, for him and for other photographers, he got the sitting. After that right words in right ears did not matter any more. His photographs spoke for themselves and led him indirectly through the corridors of Buckingham Palace to Clarence House, where he first met Princess Margaret under purely professional conditions.

What happened after that is anyone's guess. One thing, however, is certain. Princess Margaret resolved that there was going to be no repetition of the Townsend affair and Commander Richard Colville, RN, the much-criticized press secretary of the Queen, obviously regarded this as a major challenge. He has often boasted that the main job of the Queen's press secretary is to see that things affecting the Royal Family do not get into the newspapers—and this time he succeeded magnificently. Nowhere was the news more of a surprise than in Fleet Street, in part, of course, because Tony Jones could have royal appointments without the customary inquisitive speculation. It was reasonable that a royal photographer should have appointments with royalty. It was most unreasonable to assume that there could be possibly a romance of the princess and the photographer—and by keeping away from Princess Margaret in public, the camouflage was as complete as could be.

Now, of course, everyone is working it all out like a jig saw puzzle. Former girl friends remember how he changed a rendezvous at the last minute and now recall that Princess Margaret went there that night with a few friends. The princess was seen in public quite a lot with Billy Wallace, once a hot favorite, and Tony seemed to concentrate on a London actress who is half-Chinese. There are suggestions that she was part of the camouflage. But the fact remains that only a handful of people were aware of the budding romance outside the Royal Family.

EVEN SO, there were some misgivings. Tony's father was away in the West Indies on his honeymoon. Tony's mother had married again, too. It seemed that divorce was never very far away from the princess, but eventually it was agreed that the sins of the father, if sins they were, should not be visited upon the son. Mr. Armstrong-Jones, senior, was a distinguished QC, and in days when a former prime minister was a divorcee—something which would have been impossible even 20 years ago—the objections were largely academic. The young man himself was a bachelor and could not be held responsible for an, parental differences. But no one pretends that it does not raise problems of protocol, even though protocol has been severely changed in recent years.

A divorcee is no longer a royal untouchable—but he or she has definitely a lower status. At Ascot they have to remain in the outer royal enclosure—the inner is still for those legally untainted by marital offences. Not until very recently could a divorcee get an invitation to a royal garden party, but time and the times have mellowed royal disapproval. Today it is regarded mainly as nominal. It could hardly be otherwise, with very nearly as many divorced cabinet ministers as others—a state which would have precluded the holding of office only a short while ago.

Most of the difficulties ironed out, the main arguments now centre around the arrangements for the Westminster Abbey wedding likely to give an extraordinary boost to the tourist trade this summer. People without a hope of getting into the abbey, will still pay fabulously to see the pomp and ceremony which goes with it—only one degree less than a coronation. Troops have already started rehearsing for the pageantry of that day, speculators are already busy bidding for sites on the probable royal route, television organizers are already ordering additional cameras and vans to record the biggest ceremonial occasion since the coronation. And everyone is hoping that the Queen of Tonga will be back again.

Politically it will take the edge off party politics, for all the world loves a lover; economically it will take the edge off any recession the pessimists predicted, because such royal occasions are good for business; and the main query now is whether the royal wedding will be made into a truly Commonwealth occasion by timing it to coincide with the end of the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference.

Indeed it is quite surprising what can happen just because Mr. Jones has happened to fall in love.

When Old-Timers in Victoria Look Back They Appreciate The CHANGING SCENE

ARNOLD "HANDY ANDY" JOHNSON, old-time compositor with The Daily Colonist, looks back and wonders, Do You Remember:

The time when the circus came to town and set up tents where the BCE bus depot now stands, and proceeded to enlighten the public in a manner peculiar to that type of entertainment? One member of the "hey rube" fraternity — the strong man — perhaps with more physical development than he had common sense in his head challenged for a purse any member of the audience — a challenge that was immediately accepted by one Henry Behnsen. (A digression here: Old-timers will remember "Hen" as an eight-year-old boy who boxed in the Royal Victoria Theatre, Douglas and View. Henry grew up, of course, and one of his fights was with Joe Bailey — it ended in a draw).

Now back to the circus: "Hen" crawled into the ring and in a few rounds clobbered the strong man. There was an argument and Henry said: "Til fight him again and if I don't knock him out in one round you can keep the purse." And knock him out in one he did.

That iron pipe baggage rack atop the old Dominion Hotel bus? What happened to the bus is not known but the rack somehow landed out in North Saanich where it covered a sewer for many, many years. He pedalled all the way to the Mount, spent an hour and three-quarters finding the cow and then, holding onto the 50-foot chain with one hand and pushing his bike with the other, he eventually got himself, his bike and half the length of chain over the Avenue with the cow on the other side of it. synthetic resin plant which produces a gas 87 per cent nitrogen and 13 per cent carbon dioxide—another economy unit.

The synthetic resin plant, producing alkyl resin, contains the big electro vapor Dowtherm kettle, heated by electricity, with an overhead weigh tank for accuracy, and the necessary controls. Below is a thinning tank on a scales so delicate it can be motivated by the light pressure of a finger, but weighing up to 20,000 lb. And beyond are nine 4,000-gallon storage tanks.

The firm is the only one in Canada with its own latex reactor, for manufacture of latex paint, becoming increasingly popular.

Then there is the platform scale on which kettles are loaded for cooking of conventional varnishes, the thinning section of the varnish plant, and the tank storage. The lacquers and shellac solutions are prepared close by.

IN THE LABORATORY tests of all sorts are going on continuously, with pint samples of each batch of any product retained for three years. There is a miniature paint factory here—miniatures of every piece of manufacturing equipment in the main plant.

A weatherometer produces the result of outdoor weathering for a year in 11 days. A salt fog cabinet tests for corrosion resistance for iron and steel finishes. There's a cabinet for blister resistance tests, and another little gadget that does a concentrated job of washing with various solvents to determine length of wear. Another instrument shows precisely the effort required to paint a given surface with any desired product; an effective device to increase economy.

This is a highly scientific, stream-lined operation and it isn't too much to say that old "W. J.", the long-headed prospector of another era, would have appreciated it vastly.

SECOND BRIDE SHIP

... WELCOME WAS WARM

THE STEAMER Tynemouth, which reached Victoria in September of 1862 is, in our history, called "the bride ship," for aboard were 60 young women who had come to the Crown Colony on Vancouver Island in search of husbands.

So stirring was the Tynemouth's arrival here that this vessel has largely blotted out the story of a second bride-ship, the Robert Lowe, which reached Victoria in January of 1863.

Thus it is that the Robert Lowe joins the other "May flowers" of our history. The Tynemouth, the Boey, the Thames City, the Norman Morrison, the Princess Royal.

Each of these vessels carried men and women who founded families in this colony of Vancouver Island, and whose descendants are still among us.

The story of the Robert Lowe has been largely ignored by our historians. There is no picture of her in the provincial archives, nor of her captain. A search for these pictures would be worthwhile — fascinating, complex, no doubt, but rewarding, and of great value to our historical records. Here is a project for one of our university students; perhaps a thesis could be written on our two bride-ships — the Tynemouth and the Robert Lowe. And he might learn while he's at it — who was Robert Lowe?

The Tynemouth was still at sea, nearing this port, when there was a note in The Colonist in August of 1862:

"Another steamer and more girls from London," said the headline.

"Show, Lindsay and Company of Austin Friars, London, have a steamer named the Robert Lowe lying in the London docks to sail for Vancouver's Island. She will bring a second invoice of females for our bachelors. The first is due at any time in Tynemouth."

By mid-December, after the Tynemouth's arrival excitement had died away, Victorians commenced to look for the Robert Lowe. The bachelors were excited — surely, now, they said to each other, they would find a wife, for single women then, quite unlike today, were scarce in Victoria, and bachelors then unlike now, were plentiful. This is true of all new countries.

DAY AFTER DAY during the Christmas-New Year season of 1862-63 Victorians went to the waterfront, and looked out toward Race Rocks. Who would be the first to glimpse the Robert Lowe... and dash back to town to spread the news on the street corners and in the taverns?

We don't know, and we'll never know, but we read of the Robert Lowe's arrival in The Colonist of Jan. 12, 1863:

"This long and anxiously expected vessel has at length arrived in Esquimalt harbor. She left Gravesend on the 18th September last, and has consequently been 114 days en voyage. She brings 180 passengers of both sexes among whom are many married ladies, come out to join their husbands who are residing here."

The Robert Lowe's voyage was history-making in this regard. "During the voyage there were no deaths aboard and everyone enjoyed the trip amazingly."

The Robert Lowe arrived here with more passengers than when she left London, and she touched at no port en route. "Three interesting little charms were added to the community on board during the voyage and we are happy to state that under the judicious care and kind treatment of the surgeon of the ship, Dr. John Ash, both mothers and infants are, in common with the rest of the passengers, in the enjoyment of excellent health."

In the advertising columns, the day after the Robert Lowe's arrival we read of these births: "At sea, Dec. 4, on board the steamship Robert Lowe, 40 south, 82 west, the wife of John Winger, of a daughter."

At sea, Dec. 9 — 29 south, 34 west, the wife of Thomas Morris, of a daughter."

CAPT. CONGALTON was master of the Robert Lowe. Nothing is known of him here today, and as far as can be ascertained he came here but once.

The Colonist noted: "The passengers speak in the highest terms of commendation of the captain and his officers. He was kind, courteous and attentive to the wishes of all on board, and they, like true British tars, ably and efficiently gave effect to their commander's wishes."

It was unusual for a ship not to touch anywhere during the long voyage from Britain to this island, around Cape Horn, but the Robert Lowe did, and this fact brought special mention.

... the captain considered he was amply provided with provisions to bring him here, and being able to distill an abundant daily supply of water for the use of the passengers and crew it was not necessary to call on way for either of these necessities. We understand, however, that had time of arrival been protracted a week longer the store of edibles would have been all-nigh exhausted, a fact which tells much in the favor of the captain's accuracy in calculation of the time in which he could make the passage from port to port."

A PASSENGER in Victoria's second "bride ship," Noah Shakespeare later became mayor of the city.

Because the lasses who arrived by the Tynemouth some months previously had caused such excitement here, and some strange goings-on among the bachelors. The Colonist, in the Robert Lowe's case, attempted to play down the young ladies aboard, and concentrated on the other passengers:

"We are glad to notice among the arrivals several married men, with their wives and families; these will be a valuable addition to our colonists and we look to their taking up residence and remaining among us. There are also, we understand, several gentlemen of capital and enterprise who intend going into mercantile and other pursuits, for which they have a good field, to work upon here."

THE YOUNG LADIES were brought in "just by the way," so to speak. "In addition to the general passengers there are 36 young females, who have been sent out by the philanthropic Miss Rye; these girls are chiefly from Manchester, and must have conducted themselves at home with exemplary propriety, to be entitled to the assistance which their benefactress bestowed upon them."

Now, who was Miss Rye? There's something else for a student of history to unearth.

The Colonist was worried that perhaps some of the girls might fall by the wayside in this rough new land: "They will be welcomed by many families — who have been in need of respectable female servants, and we trust the poor, friendless creatures will be placed in no other kind of establishments."

Capt. Congalton kept the girls strictly under his eye on the long voyage out: "On board ship they occupied a separate compartment, never being allowed to mingle with the other passengers, and for the fatherly solicitude and scrupulous care bestowed upon them by the captain, that gentleman has entitled himself to the lasting gratitude of the girls, and the thanks of every feeling heart in the community. One of the passengers, a gentleman of high respectability and intelligence, gave us a touching account of the prudent arrangements of Capt. Congalton for the comfort and happiness of those girls and his unceasing regard for their strict propriety and behaviour. Everything, in fact, that a tender parent could do for his daughter's honor and welfare was done by the captain for those committed to his human and judicious oversight."

ABOARD that voyage was a clergyman destined to leave his mark on our history: "In attending to their spiritual welfare, the captain had the valued assistance of Rev. W. S. Rhee, who was always ready and willing to aid, counsel and advise when called upon."

The Colonist warned town-folk not to take the arrival of the young ladies as if it were a circus or Roman carnival, but to be dignified and cordial: "We hope the committee-in-charge will make better arrangements for their landing than in the case of the Tynemouth, which excited so much dissatisfaction amongst the young people who came by her. There is not the slightest necessity for any parade (as was done with the Tynemouth girls) about so simple a matter as the landing of a few passengers, and we cannot conceive of anything more heartless or ill-conceived than to have poor young strangers, we don't care of what sex, subjected to the rude gaze of a motley crowd of roughs, who, instead of running about idle, should be engaged with the shovel and axe earning an honest living."

Everything seems to have gone off fairly well, though there were a few, as there always are, who had to make themselves conspicuous and, consequently, troublesome, and embarrassed not only the girls, but Victoria's solid citizens themselves, and no-doubt put Mayor Thomas Harris, into a fine rage.

The gunboat Grappler brought the young women from Esquimalt into Victoria, and Capt. Congalton was with them. There was a greeting: "Capt. Moore's steamboat Flying Dutchman hoisted her burgee and ensign... in token of welcome."

The Lady Mayoress, as the mayor's wife was called in those days, and Mrs. Edward Cridge headed the official welcoming committee, and behind them jostled more than 1,000 people, and so "the girls had to run the gantlet — amid the utterance of coarse jokes and personalities, though, in justice, we must state the majority of those present were very well conducted. Members of the committee present were Dr. Davie and Rev. E. Cridge, whose gentle remonstrances failed to keep the crowd from pressing forward."

AT LEAST THREE of the Robert Lowe's male passengers made their mark in Victoria... Henry Saunders, who became a prosperous importer of groceries and provisions; John Bagnall, who manufactured the first piano in Victoria, and had a music store for years, Noah Shakespeare, who became mayor of Victoria and for years was our postmaster.

Here's a break-down of the trades and professions of the Robert Lowe's passengers: 14 gentlemen (that means they had money); three engineers, five merchants, 12 clerks, one gardener, three shipwrights, one auctioneer, three carriers, two mechanics, one carpenter, one chemist, one fishmonger, four butchers, two millwrights, three bakers, three farmers, one innkeeper, one grocer, two factory overlookers, one pianoforte maker, eight mariners, three miners, three joiners, one victualer, one printer, one hairdresser, one tanner, one builder, one waste dealer, one iron manufacturer, two general dealers, one surveyor, one cabinet maker, one laborer, one matron, two weavers.

Aboard were 157 English, 13 Scots, four Irish, two Italians, two Germans and one Pole.

While she was in port The Colonist gave some of the details of the Robert Lowe: "This magnificent screw steamship of 1,500 tons, propelled by an engine of 300 horsepower, is 210 feet long... eight years old. For a considerable period she was engaged by the home government as a troop ship — and carried over 20,000 British heroes to and from the fields of glory in distant lands."

The Robert Lowe's sailors, when she was here, fell so in love with Esquimalt and Victoria that most of them deserted, a common occurrence in those days.

On Feb. 2, 1863, the Robert Lowe left Esquimalt for San Francisco. She would be employed in future in the direct trade between China and San Francisco.

The last we read of the Robert Lowe, is this, in November of 1873: "Loss of the Robert Lowe. The telegraph announces the loss, off the coast of Newfoundland, of the steamship Robert Lowe, for some years employed in repairing, and laying Atlantic cables."

In any maritime history of British Columbia the Robert Lowe cannot be ignored.
